Davis UWC Scholars

The 2019 Report of the Davis UWC Scholars Program

“I’m trying to stimulate leaders of the future to make a difference through the grounding in education that I’m helping to give them. When I started my business career, I took my own history lesson from Princeton: I learned how leaders make a difference, in their countries, in their centuries. So I invested in leaders, and that investment helped me to be successful. . . .I’m looking to invest again in leaders of the future.”

SHELBY M.C. DAVIS
Co-founder and Philanthropist

“We strive to build critical masses of globally minded young men and women on American campuses, to foster highly personal relationships between outstanding Americans and non-Americans, and to seed global networks. These networks can serve a higher calling of international understanding and common purpose among future leaders in all walks of life in our world.”

PHILIP O. GEIER
Co-founder and Executive Director

UNITING THE WORLD

Why the Davis United World College Scholars Program?

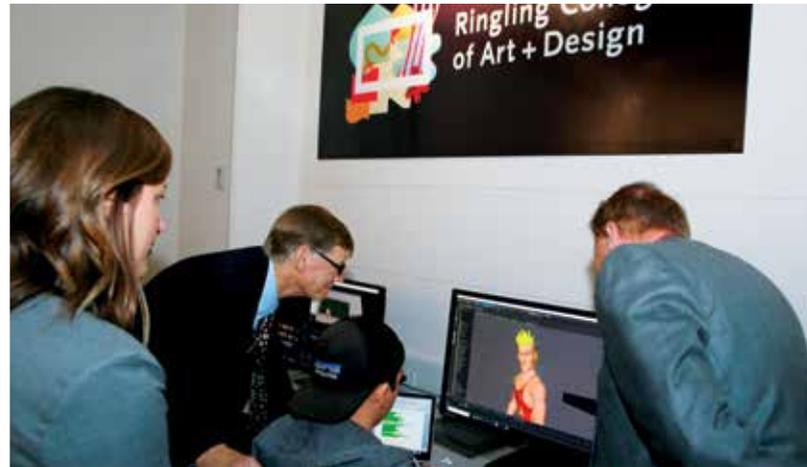

By Philip O. Geier, Ph.D., Executive Director

We live in turbulent and unpredictable times. The 21st century has brought new challenges, threats, and uncertainties, making the world a fragile place. The pace is ever quickening and any sense of common purpose seems to be elusive. We are constantly bombarded with information that confuses more than it clarifies. We are confronted by issues of mobility, nationalism, the environment, and political divisiveness. Yet, we are hopeful — hopeful because of the future possibilities of our scholars and the personal relationships they are building on the campuses of our nearly 100 American college and university partners. These partnerships are giving shape to a promising network of tomorrow's decision makers committed to making the world a better place in a spirit of mutual respect. The Davis United World College (UWC) Scholars Program is investing extensively and with confidence in these future possibilities, and we invite you to explore our vision in this report.

The Davis UWC Scholars Program was co-founded in 2000 by philanthropist Shelby M. C. Davis and international educator Philip O. Geier. It has grown since then to become the largest privately funded international undergraduate scholarship program in the world. The program's strategic objective is to advance international understanding through education. It is built on two assumptions:

Philanthropist Shelby Davis and veteran international educator Phil Geier are partners in building international understanding through education. The Davis UWC Scholars Program invests in scholarships at American colleges and universities for promising students from all over the world.

- » that promising future leaders from a broad range of cultures should be afforded greater educational opportunities and enhanced global networking; and
- » these educational opportunities should take place in a variety of U.S. colleges and universities, in the belief that, by becoming more diverse and globally engaged, these American schools will be more effective learning communities for all their students.

The program provides grants to selected partner U.S. colleges and universities in support of need-based scholarships for American and foreign scholars. Students who are eligible for this support have gained admission on their own merit to these schools, having successfully completed their final two years of high school at a group of international schools called United World Colleges, which teach to the International Baccalaureate diploma. The growing UWC movement now has schools located in the United States, Armenia, Bosnia & Herzegovina, Canada, China, Costa Rica, eSwatini, Germany, Hong Kong, India, Italy, Japan, the Netherlands, Norway, Singapore, Thailand, and the United Kingdom.

Since their founding in 1962 at the height of the Cold War, these UWC schools have provided educational opportunities to outstanding students from over 175 countries, representing all regions of the world. UWC students are selected in their home countries by indigenous, voluntary committees charged to find the most promising teenagers eager to pursue their education and leadership and cross-cultural skills in a global context.

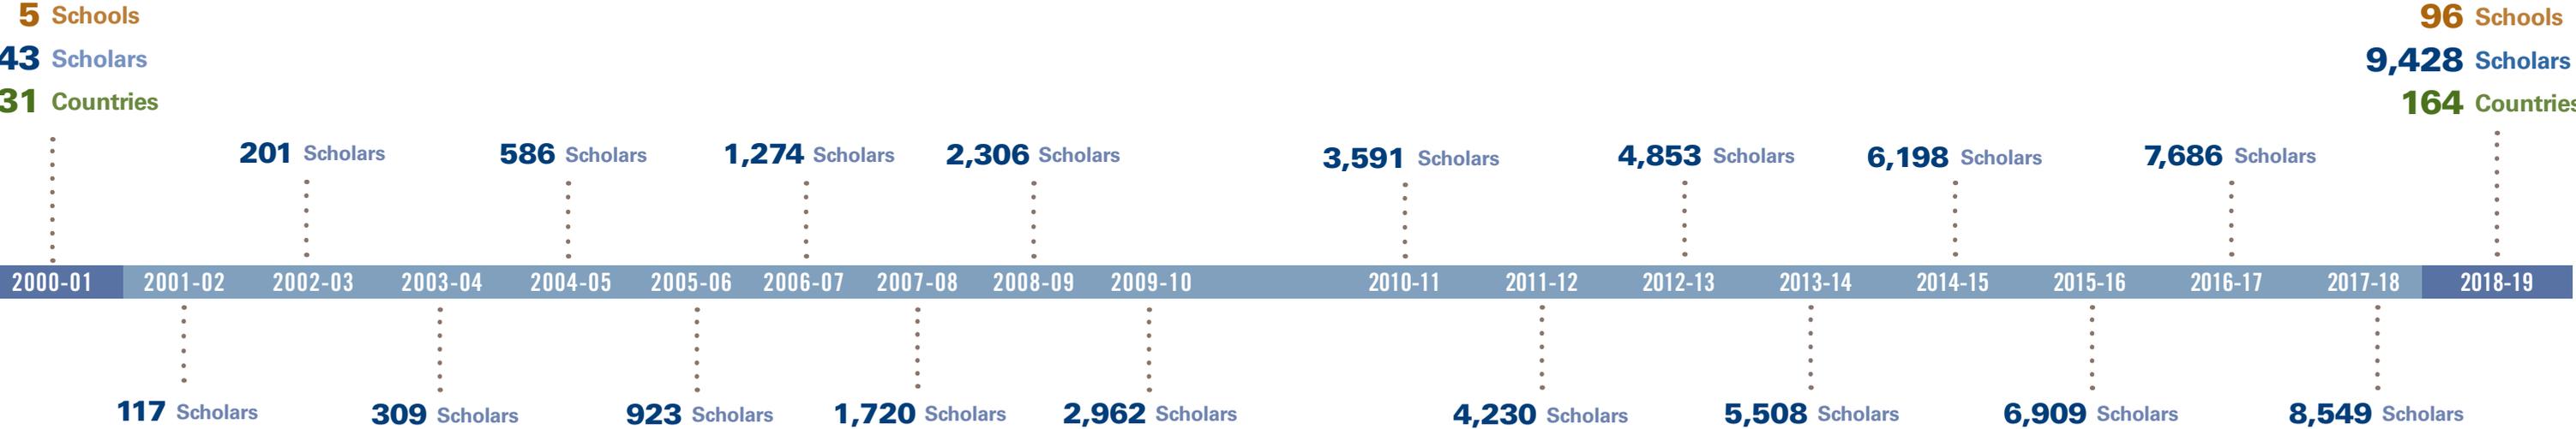

Under the leadership of former UWC-USA president Phil Geier, the Davis UWC Scholars Program now supports the education of 3,100 UWC graduates on 96 American campuses. Headquartered at Middlebury College, the program partners with these colleges and universities to meet the financial needs of these promising scholars throughout their four-year undergraduate degree studies. The program has five principal goals:

- » provide scholarship support for exemplary and promising students, from a wide range of countries and cultures, who have absorbed the passion and mission of their UWC schools for building international understanding;
- » build meaningful clusters of these globally aware scholars within the undergraduate populations of selected partner colleges and universities across the U.S.;
- » help transform the American undergraduate experience through international diversity and intercultural exchange — as much for the large majority of traditional American students as for the scholars;
- » leverage the value of this philanthropic initiative — to the long-term benefit of all learners and their teachers — to contribute to strategic shifts in institutional thinking, and to bring greater resources to the effort; and
- » contribute proactively to the well-being of our volatile, highly interdependent world by expecting our scholars and those with whom they interact to take personal responsibility for helping shape a better world.

The Davis UWC Scholars Program is at once practical and inspirational. It reflects the huge potential of private philanthropy to promote international understanding in dynamic, expanding ways, through educational institutions that share its strategic vision and are committed to building greater opportunities for global engagement for all their students. In essence, the program is about using philanthropic leadership to leverage additional support for transformative impact on individuals, institutions, and the wider world.

Nineteen Years of Program Growth

How This Works

Since 1962, thousands of young people from 175 nations have been selected by committees in their home countries to complete their last two years of high school at one of 17 United World College schools. UWC schools are in Armenia, Bosnia & Herzegovina, Canada, China, Costa Rica, eSwatini, Germany, Hong Kong, India, Italy, Japan, the Netherlands, Norway, Singapore, Thailand, the United Kingdom, and the United States. The UWC movement works to build multinational, cross-cultural communication and understanding among all its students.

In 2000, the Davis United World College Scholars Program began providing scholarship grants to a pilot group of American colleges and universities to support UWC graduates who matriculated at these schools. These pilot schools — Colby College, College of the Atlantic, Middlebury College, Princeton University, and Wellesley College — are graduating their 16th class of Davis United World College Scholars in 2019. Based on the success of building clusters of globally minded scholars at these pilot schools, Davis philanthropy chose to greatly expand the number of campuses and scholars in the program.

This academic year, there are 96 U.S. colleges and universities in partnership with the Davis United World College Scholars Program. For partner schools, the program provides annual grants in support of need-based scholarships for each matriculated UWC graduate for up to four years of undergraduate study. The total number of Davis UWC Scholars attending these schools has now reached 3,113 from 164 countries. The 2019 graduating class includes 680 students from 136 nations. To date, the program has supported 9,428 scholars.

With their education made possible through their own merits and the help of the Davis United World College Scholars Program and its partner schools, Davis UWC Scholars will go on to play important, meaningful, often leadership roles in their communities, in their home countries, and in the world. And the partner schools will have become more globally engaged and more internationally diverse educational communities.

Davis UWC Scholars Leave Enduring Legacy at OU

The University of Oklahoma was awarded the Davis Cup for the sixth consecutive year in recognition of its enrollment of first-year Davis UWC Scholars. This year's freshman class includes 56 Davis UWC Scholars.

OU is the only public university in the nation to ever be awarded the Davis Cup and also has the largest total enrollment of Davis UWC Scholars in the nation, including 217 students representing 85 countries.

"These young scholars who hail from other countries are such an important part of our campus. They leave an enduring legacy and take with them a top-notch education and lasting memories of their time here," said President James L. Gallogly.

"Congratulations to the University of Oklahoma for once again winning the Davis Cup!" applauded Shelby Davis and Phil Geier, co-founders of the Davis UWC Scholars Program. "We are proud of the university's deep commitment to international understanding through education and are pleased that so many UWC graduates are pursuing their higher education in the heartland of the United States. May the friendships they make be lifelong and world-changing."

Davis UWC Scholars have earned a reputation of not only being outstanding students, but also as exceptional members of the university community. Since 2008, when OU enrolled its first UWC scholars, these students have achieved recognition as members of the President's Leadership Class, President's Community Scholars, and as Outstanding Freshmen, Sophomores, Juniors, and Seniors. They have served in a variety of leadership roles, including as Ronnie K. Irani Center for the Creation of Economic Wealth team leaders, International Advisory Committee executive officers, and resident advisers.

I Hit the Jackpot, Investing in You

By Shelby Davis

This message by Shelby M.C. Davis, co-founder of the Davis UWC Scholars Program, is adapted from a talk that Shelby gave last October at Waterford Kamhlaba United World College of Southern Africa in Mbabane, eSwatini.

You know, there’s a saying that the UWC education is like no other, and it sure is — and this school is the happiest school. If only the world could be this happy! So thank you for giving us such a great time.

I’m going to try to tell you a little bit about my life story. One thing I’m going to talk about is the family motto, which is: “The first 30 years of your life, focus on learning, the next 30 years of your life focus on earning, and the remaining 30 years or so of your life, if you’ve been fortunate especially, focus on returning.” To Learn, Earn and Return is the motto.

I learned a lot of good habits, I think, from my parents and my grandmother. They taught me to be creative, frugal, and not to be a bragger. You know, be friendly. And they wanted us to focus on the job at hand. My father used to say, “Don’t put off for tomorrow what you can do today, because you know it’s going to take the same amount of time tomorrow, so why not get it done right now?” That’s how he did it.

We had chickens when I was growing up. I was under 10 years old, and my job was to clean the coop, keep the chickens healthy — but also I could earn money if I sold the extra eggs to the neighbors. So I learned how to make money quite early in life, around seven or eight years old I think, taking masses of eggs around to the neighbors. My parents taught us to save. If you save, you’re going to have money. You have to save.

One of the things they talked about was, “use it up, wear it out, make do, or do without.” That keeps you out of the store. And my father taught me the rule of compound interest — it was called the eighth wonder of the world by Albert Einstein. I won’t go into that now, but it’s how, if you saved money and invested over a long period, the compounding is astounding.

Transformational philanthropists Gale and Shelby Davis

I got my business genes from my father and my humanitarian genes from my mother. My mother was a dreamer and an idealist; my father was a realist and a doer. Both were internationalists — that was very important. They introduced me to a microcosm of the world on some trips when I was about your age. We took Pan American Airlines around the world. You could stop over at various places.

You can learn from leaders.

Next, I was on my way to college. I was told by my parents, “Whatever courses you take, think about why you’re taking them regarding who you are and what they’re about. And usually they’re about people that have survived the test of history; that’s why you study them.”

So you study great authors, you study great musicians, you study artists, you study physicists, or in science everything from Galileo to Einstein. You know these people have in the past been successful and made a difference, enough so that you’re studying them now. And you can learn from leaders.

In effect, you often are studying people who were leaders in their field, at the time they were around. So that’s something to think about when you’re going to college: Don’t worry too much about what you’re studying — look for leadership, and lessons from leadership.

After college, I went to work at the Bank of New York. It’s the oldest bank in the country. They recruited me and their salaries were low, but I was able to live at home and save money. I loved the job, and I was learning on the job. This was still the “learn” phase, and I was being paid to learn at my first job.

So remember, your first job isn’t important — you should continue to keep learning. It’s 30 years we learn, so it’s not just college; it’s after college too. This is an important thing to think about in your choice of job. Don’t just think about the money; think about how much you’re learning.

I got promoted because other people ahead of me were leaving. I ended up being the head of the research department at 27 years old. At 30, just on schedule for the learn-earn-return cycle, I decided, I’ve learned enough, I’m going to try going out on my own. So with a partner I met at the bank, we went out on our own.

We started slowly, very small, one employee and ourselves. And it was slow going for many years, but we lived frugally, and we learned more, and we invested well. Essentially, we got lucky: we got a tailwind.

The stock market had done nothing for 10 to 15 years, and it was just bobbing around; then all of a sudden in 1982 it took off. By 1997 it had gone up 10 times 10 times. So we had this huge tailwind, and our assets under management grew from $2 billion to $35 billion in about 10 years, the last 10 years of my working career.

I was mesmerized by the talent I saw.

So now I was 60 years old, right on schedule. I thought we’d done well; that was 30 years of work in the earning phase. Our minister said to me once, “You know, Shelby, I’ve never seen anybody take their money down in the box when they go. It’s better if you use it while you’re alive.” So that’s what I started doing, and I got extremely lucky.

I met a man named Dr. Phil Geier. He was running the UWC in New Mexico, and we had our back office in New Mexico then. I met him on a ski chairlift, and he eventually got me a couple of months later to go down and see the United World College — and I was mesmerized by the talent I saw. Music, dance, you name it; it was a fantastic experience. You learn just about as much out of the classroom as you learn in the classroom in a place like this.

So I decided Americans need to learn about the world. We’re going to give some scholarships to the Americans that go to these UWC schools, and that’s what we did.

Then I started visiting the UWC schools. We went to Vancouver, in Canada; we went to Norway, Wales, and Italy, and then we got down here. We’ve been to all the UWCs at least once. I learned from work that it’s nice to have ideas, but then you want to check up and see if they’re working.

For almost 20 years now, we’ve been investing in students who have one characteristic. They have gone to a UWC; that’s our gateway to these scholarships. And it’s a good gateway because it develops winning habits. If you get in, then you’ve won a contest — and if you apply to and get into a university in the United States, what does that tell me? I’m investing in you because you have winning habits.

Your parents probably told you, don’t get bad habits, because those bad habits are hard to break; but let me tell you, from my frugal past, if you get good habits they’re hard to break. So I bet that you have proven that you have winning habits. You have talents that can make a difference in the world, and make the world a better place.

It’s a big world, I admit — but no matter where you are in your community, at your job, in the family, the right way counts, and the right habits that you develop will make a difference. Wherever you are, whatever field you’re in, we need more people like you in the world. And we need the happiness that comes out of this school, and the other UWCs, to be spread around the world.

So you’ve been the right cause at the right time in the right place. And I hit the jackpot again, investing in you.

Writing to Shelby Davis — and Receiving a Reply

Letters and emails from Davis UWC Scholars often come to Shelby Davis, co-founder of the program. And the writers often get a personal response.

For example, Shelby received an email last year from Matteo Russo (Italy, UWC Adriatic, Princeton ’20), who wrote: “I would like to thank you very much for the opportunity I have been experiencing here at Princeton University.

“I have established strong, indissoluble friendships with people from a multitude of social and cultural backgrounds,” Matteo wrote. He said he had become “passionate about the inspiring and wonderful field of computer science,” as he’s begun to discover how its algorithms and the math behind them “can be exploited jointly to research in apparently unrelated fields ranging from biomedicine to politics.

“For instance, last summer, through Princeton, I had the pleasure to work at the Max Planck Institute for Dynamics and Self-Organization. I worked as an algorithm designer and lead software developer for a bacterium video-tracking program that could help in breast-cancer therapy research.”

Experiences like these, Matteo summed up, are giving him the chance to “put into practice the UWC mission statement—through intelligent means like teaching, researching, or starting new, impactful ideas that would help society to improve.”

“Matteo, your letter came to a history major in the class of 1958. In my day I never heard of algorithms,” Shelby responded. “Your work sounds incredibly interesting and will be a help in so many fields to change our world, hopefully for the better.

“I know your intentions are to make a difference and I’m very proud to be supporting you,” Shelby added — “but believe me, you got this support all on your own merits. Keep up the good work and don’t be afraid to stay in touch, and all the best.”

PHILANTHROPISTS HONOR ROLL

The Davis UWC Scholars Program combines the transformational philanthropy of the Davis family with donations from many others to our partner colleges and universities. Given this financial partnership, we are pleased to recognize their generous support for today's scholars and tomorrow's leaders. Each partner school was invited to submit the names of those they would like listed in this report along with the Davises. This effort at donor recognition only scratches the surface of the many who give to their alma maters in support of the financial aid awarded to our scholars. We are grateful to those who are contributing to their schools in this way, and look forward to the continuing growth of this honor roll in the years ahead.

This recognition is arranged by partner school with the information they provided. It captures the growing number of philanthropists captivated by the value of supporting our scholars — and theirs — by investing at their chosen college or university. Some have given to annual funds, indicating their interest in the Davis UWC Scholars Program. Others have given larger amounts ($10,000 or more) toward their alma mater's portion of a scholar's total financial-aid package and have been assigned scholars, sharing naming opportunities with the Davises. A few have given major endowments in support of international scholarships assigned to Davis UWC Scholars and share naming opportunities with the Davises each year. At the heart of the Davis UWC Scholars Program is “giving back,” a trait we strive to see manifested over time in our scholars as they make their way in the world.

Where the Scholars Come From

The global community of United World College schools, or UWCs, includes 17 institutions on five continents. All offer the International Baccalaureate diploma, a high-quality secondary-school credential. UWC schools, colleges, and programs deliver a challenging and transformational educational experience to a diverse cross section of students, inspiring them to fulfill the UWC mission: to make education a force to unite people, nations, and cultures for peace and a sustainable future.

The UWC Schools

UWC Adriatic, founded in 1982 near Trieste, was the first UWC outside the English-speaking world. The school's buildings and residences are spread throughout the Italian-Slovene village of Duino. All students study Italian, and participate in a social-service program with the local community.

UWC Atlantic College, the first UWC, was founded in 1962 in the 12th-century St. Donat's Castle on the south Wales coastline. The college places a strong focus on community service with a wide range of opportunities open to students.

UWC Costa Rica, near the capital San Jose, is UWC's only bilingual school, teaching the IB in English and Spanish. It became a UWC in 2006, and its approach is built on peace, environment, and multiculturalism.

UWC Changshu China opened in 2015 and offers a two-year IB diploma program as well as a one-year pre-IB preparatory program. Changshu is located in Yangtze Delta, in the Suzhou metropolitan area. The vision of the first campus in mainland China is to become a sustainable village dedicated to the fostering of peace and international understanding.

UWC Dilijan opened in 2014, with generous funding from the RVVF Foundation. The campus is set on 88 acres of land backing onto a beautiful national park. The educational program is diverse and engages with both the expansive setting and the local community. The college builds upon the movement's legacy of engaging with postconflict zones to create dialogue and a peaceful future.

UWC ISAK Japan, the youngest UWC college, admitted its first students in 2017. The school was founded by an alumna of UWC Pearson College and offers an innovative leadership program integrated into all aspects of life including academics, cocurricular activities, and the residential experience. Students also have the opportunity to study Japanese language and to explore Japanese culture, history, and traditions.

Li Po Chun UWC of Hong Kong, founded in 1992, emphasizes the Chinese traditions of proper conduct, practical wisdom, appropriate social relationships, and respect for academic learning. Li Po Chun has developed strong links with various parts of the country, especially for service activities.

UWC Maastricht was founded in 2009 in the Netherlands through the merger of two international schools. It is the third UWC school that educates younger students, along with teaching the IB diploma.

UWC Mahindra College, founded in 1997, is in a rural area of the western Ghats near Pune. The school has dedicated much of its land to a biodiversity park and conservation reserve, which is a study resource for all local schools and colleges. Mahindra also supports local schools with its educational program, Akshara, and community-service projects.

UWC in Mostar, founded in 2006, is the first UWC with the explicit aim of contributing to the reconstruction of a postconflict society, in this case Bosnia & Herzegovina. A diversity of students from the country, the region, and abroad live, study, and volunteer together in the community, offering the host nation a working example of integrated education.

Pearson College UWC was founded in 1974 on Vancouver Island in British Columbia, Canada. The floating marine-sciences center contains a well-equipped seafront environmental-systems lab, and students conduct research above and below water at nearby Race Rocks, an ecological reserve managed by the college.

UWC Red Cross Nordic opened in 1995 on Flekkefjord in western Norway. Both regional and Red Cross traditions are reflected in the school's emphasis on Nordic studies and humanitarian and environmental concerns. Cooperation with the Red Cross creates service opportunities in areas such as first aid, lifesaving, youth training, and humanitarian action.

UWC Robert Bosch College

opened in 2014 in Germany. Built thanks to the generosity of the Robert Bosch Foundation, the campus is a former Carthusian monastery in Freiburg. Recognized as a "green city," it's suited to the college's emphasis on environmental sustainability and how technology can be used and developed to build a peaceful and sustainable future.

UWC South East Asia, founded in 1971, is the largest UWC school, with about 5,389 students ages 4–18 at two campuses in Singapore at full capacity. The school's global-concerns program introduces concepts in leadership and organization, and all students are encouraged to develop their own initiatives along with doing community service.

UWC Thailand is situated in northern Phuket, Thailand. Representing 65 different nationalities, it is a truly international community dedicated to the mission of making education a force to unite people, nations, and cultures for peace and a sustainable future.

Students seek to realize their highest human potential, cultivate genuine happiness, and take mindful and compassionate action.

UWC-USA was founded in 1982 on the site of historic Montezuma Castle near Las Vegas, New Mexico. Programs emphasize community engagement, wilderness experience, service, and Southwest studies. Students also study intercultural communication and mediation through the Constructive Engagement of Conflict (CEC) and global-issues programs.

Waterford Kamhlaba UWC became a UWC in 1981 and educates students ages 11–18. Just outside Mbabane, the capital of eSwatini, the UWC is a pan-African institution with a global outlook. Students and staff are committed to understanding and addressing the complex challenges facing Africa and the rest of the world.

UNDERGRADUATES IN ACTION

Boosting Women toward Business Careers

Claremont McKenna College has a number of preprofessional student organizations — but when Mei Masuyama '19 (Japan, UWC of South East Asia) came to campus, there were none for female students interested in business careers. So she helped to start Claremont Women in Business.

“We wanted a place where women can feel safe with whatever interests they have in business. We wanted to welcome everyone,” says Mei, who is aiming for a career in commercial real estate back home in Tokyo. The student group has grown to over 40 members. Mei, a board member, runs its Career Division. “Most of the work I do currently is talking to recruiters, hosting recruiting events, hosting workshops: how to write a resume, a cover letter, how to network and all that. We have a database of all the top internships or connections that people in our organization have, so that’s one set of people we talk to. We also cold-email and cold-call: ‘Hey, this is who we are, we were wondering if you’d be interested in partnering with us.’”

A four-year member of the women’s rugby team, Mei is also co-president of International-Connect, the college’s only international student organization. “Almost all our events and our resources are also available to domestic students,” she notes, “because we want to bridge the gap between international and domestic students. That’s one of our goals.” I-Connect is also advocating for the college to add a dean for international students.

On a lighter note, Mei adds, “It’s finals week right now, people are really stressed, and stressed spelled backwards is desserts. So we’re doing an international dessert thing — people can walk in, grab something, and go back to studying. You don’t have to stay and talk to us. But you can if you want to.”

Helping to Build Public-Private Partnerships

“Social justice and human dignity are undermined when basic social infrastructure is missing or absent,” writes Svitlana Orekhova (Ukraine, UWC USA, Bates '09). As a specialist in monitoring and evaluation for the World Bank’s Public-Private Infrastructure Advisory Facility, she works to strengthen the legal and institutional framework for implementing public-private partnerships in developing countries.

“I see the difference that effective legal frameworks make when large public assets are built and financed by private companies,” Lana writes, noting that available public funds can address only about a tenth of the world’s need for basic social infrastructure. She manages a portfolio of 20 projects, providing governments with tools to make public-private partnerships work, while creating knowledge and standard language to “streamline the use of PPPs around the world.”

After Bates, Lana earned a graduate degree at Georgetown’s Edmund Walsh School of Foreign Service, then wrote evaluation reports for the consulting firm Social Impact on development programs in several nations. She worked as a project coordinator for the Eurasia Center at the Atlantic Council and spent two years at Sayari Analytics, investigating investments and corporate ownership in Latin America and Europe.

“After four years, I went back to Ukraine to see my parents in Kiev and to face the new economic and security realities, which Ukrainians have been dealing with on a daily basis all this time.” Working now in Washington, D.C., she’s an avid follower of local dance and music, and recently joined two friends in choreographing and performing a show of Kathak, a north Indian classical dance form, at the Kennedy Center’s Millenium stage.

“I am humbled by the power of the ancient dance form of Kathak, and excited to be a part of the global South Asian arts community,” Lana concludes.

Building Solar Power and a Choir

Passionate about working to bring universal energy access to his home continent, Thandolwethu “Shakes” Dlamini (eSwatini, Waterford Kamhlaba UWC, Duke '20) delayed his college graduation to work for a year in Lesotho as a mechanical engineering fellow for OnePower, an independent power producer and developer of renewable energy projects in that nation.

“My primary project is designing powerhouses for solar mini-grids,” Shakes writes from Lesotho. “The powerhouse is the structure that houses system components such as inverters, batteries and electricity distribution boards, backup generators, etc. I am also responsible for designing the site layout at the project locations.”

Shakes is also a choral singer and his interest in African music matured at UWC. He joined Duke Choral as a first-year student, “to learn more about the musical performance landscape here” — then he joined three fellow students in creating the Duke Amandla Chorus, the university’s first African choir. “I hope to share different African stories through music,” he writes, “and to also showcase diversity and richness of African cultures.”

After graduation, “I hope to pursue a master’s in energy engineering and an MBA to expand my knowledge and skills,” Shakes adds. “I have made it my life’s mission to work towards ensuring access to energy, clean water and proper sanitation throughout the African continent.”

Putting London's Spare Food to Work

Why shouldn't day-old pastries help to educate low-income kids? That's the concept behind DayOld Eats, an enterprise co-founded in London by Josephine Liang (China, Mahindra UWC, Colorado College '16). "She is part of a growing trend of food redistribution across the UK and the British Isles, seeking to remedy the estimated 10 million tons of food and drink wasted in the UK every year," Colby Magazine reported last fall.

From bakeries in and around London, Josephine, her business partner Michael Scott, and some 360 volunteers collect day-old breads and pastries — "from brownies to cinnamon rolls to artisan loaves of bread," says the DayOld Eats website. Within a day, they resell the baked goods "through treat boxes, office pop-ups, and event catering."

Proceeds are donated to Magic Breakfast, which provides free breakfasts to students who qualify for free lunch in area schools. "It's a little like Robin Hood," Josephine told the college magazine.

The organization's next step has been to develop recipe boxes, filled with surplus or donated produce, and containing shared family recipes improved by a nutritionist. "We will be distributing the boxes in schools and community centers, codesigning and cocreating the boxes with local schoolchildren, artists, and residents," Josephine writes. "The building of the boxes itself is part of the project.

"There are some cool things that we are looking to develop in the next few years, including alcohol brewed with surplus baked goods, and pasta made from surplus bread," she adds. "If any alumni are interested in the projects let me know. We are always on the lookout for passionate people to change the food system!"

Why Wait to Make a Difference?

In his first year at the University of Oklahoma, Pranav Mohan '19 (India, UWC of South East Asia) started "Money Spent Right," a campaign promoting personal philanthropy. Its website, moneyspentright.oucreate.com, opens with Pranav saying, "It's simple, choose a percentage to save from your salary and use it to change someone's life."

On campus, Pranav also serves on the Dean's Leadership Council for the College of Engineering; he's a math tutor, VP of the Robotics Club, a member of the Indian Student Association, and a student assistant in the Davis UWC Scholars Program office. Last spring he was one of 20 OU male juniors and seniors given a "Big Man on Campus" award, for "outstanding accomplishments in leadership, service, honors and academics."

With a Davis Projects for Peace grant last summer, Pranav and two other OU students addressed menstruation, a topic often laden with taboos in Indian cultures. Pranav's team supplied about 700 women with menstrual cups, an alternative that doesn't present disposal issues and is much more affordable long-term. They've been surveying the women about how the cups have impacted their lives.

"We need more philanthropy — we need to provide more support to underprivileged people," Pranav said. This value came to him from his grandmother's frugality and his mother's career in social work, and was reinforced by the Davis scholarship. He's aiming for a career in academia: "I enjoy teaching and sharing the knowledge I've gained with others. But the idea is not to give them answers. The idea is to focus on the technique, to get to the answers."

Pranav Mohan, standing behind women in India who participated in his Project for Peace.

Clarifying the Politics behind the World's Water Challenges

In cities as different as Las Vegas, Brazil's Sao Paulo, South Africa's Cape Town and Sanaa in Yemen, serious water shortages are forcing new, often costly, sometimes drastic searches for solutions. In much of the world, the impacts of climate change are likely to further deepen political tensions over scarce water supplies, wrote Scott Moore (USA, Li Po Chun UWC, Princeton '09) in an op-ed last year for the Washington Post.

Scott's book on this complex issue, Subnational Hydropolitics: Conflict, Cooperation, and Institution-Building in Shared River Basins, was published last year by the Oxford University Press. "I won't pretend the book is a page-turner, but I hope it yields some lessons for policymakers, business leaders, and others seeking to understand and address the world's water challenges," writes Scott, who left a position at the World Bank last summer for the University of Pennsylvania. He's now the director of a new, interdisciplinary China program, and a senior fellow with the new Penn Water Center.

"Many cities are running out of technical solutions to deal with water scarcity," says Scott's Post op-ed, which summarizes the book's overall lessons. "Richer cities have shown an impressive ability to adapt to water scarcity and shortages.... But even these cities are likely to have to answer a tough political question: Just how high a price are residents willing to pay to live in a city where growth may require ever more elaborate, expensive water systems?"

"I'm honored," Scott noted, "that former Prime Minister of Australia Kevin Rudd, in reviewing the book, called it 'an original and insightful contribution to our understanding of the politics and financing of water.'"

Alternative Power for an Aspiring Engineer

In the autumn of her first year at Northwestern, Ieva Stakvilevičiūtė (Lithuania, Red Cross Nordic UWC, Northwestern '20) first saw a sun-powered car built by the NUSolar student team.

"I just thought it was fantastic," she says. "I thought, that's the thing for me." This year Ieva became NUSolar's project manager. Her team's two-dozen members have been completing a three-year process of designing and producing every component of a vehicle that will compete against solar cars from other colleges and universities, in the three-day Formula Sun Grand Prix this summer.

"I started as a mechanical team member," Ieva recalls. "But I got involved in recruitment, our social-media presence, fundraising and management — and I ended up leading the team." She has helped recruit many other female students to NUSolar, whose sponsors have included Boeing, Tesla, Google, and other major U.S. corporations.

"Outside the working hours in the garage, I have to maintain communication with a whole bunch of people, to make sure our project is ongoing," Ieva says. "We have a chassis that is working and functional, and we're finalizing building the aero-shell. We are going to spend our spring quarter testing it, and preparing for the race." Teams whose cars complete at least 200 laps at the Formula Sun event qualify for the American Solar Challenge, where they'll try to cross the U.S. powered only by the sun.

Ieva also works on drawing and sculpture projects in Northwestern's art studios. "It gives me an appreciation and understanding of form, design, and materials — all important insights for an aspiring engineer."

A “Serial Entrepreneur” Gives Back

Describing himself as “a passionate philanthropist, sailor and a serial entrepreneur,” Djordje Hinic (Serbia, UWC in Mostar, University of Richmond ’13) reports that he “worked in U.S. politics as a strategist and a fundraiser, in a global IT company as a business development manager, in higher education as a lecturer, in nonprofits as a director, has served on a number of boards,” wrote a book on sales, and recently started his own consultancy, Perpetuum Projects.

Through Perpetuum Projects, Djordje has been working with Dan Lenard, a designer of “super-yachts” at the Italian firm Nuvolari Lenard. Lenard was preparing to sail solo across the Atlantic in January and February of this year, in a boat powered only by the wind, using no fossil fuels and generating no waste. The website boatinternational.com said the expedition, branded as La vita e vela, aims to “raise awareness about the damage modern-day yachting is causing to the environment.”

Djordje’s firm is handling strategy and marketing for the project. “Needless to say, this is a project of a lifetime for me.” He’s also helping a wine business and a “wine design company,” along with doing business and sales coaching for several companies.

“Ever since I got the scholarship for UWC Mostar, I always felt some kind of responsibility to give back,” Djordje writes. Last year he conceived and led a fundraising project for his UWC, collaborating with fellow members of the Rotary Club Beograd Skadarlija, that centered on sailing and generated support from donors in six countries. “Why would I wait another 40 years to start giving back?” Djordje asks. “I think no one should look for excuses why they should wait to give back.”

Bringing Faith and Science Together

When Wed Al-Nod (Yemen, UWC Atlantic, St. Olaf '19) stepped up to the pulpit last October at St. Olaf College's Boe Memorial Chapel as the featured speaker in an interfaith service, she spoke about science. She also spoke about faith — and how, at this college, she has been able to bring together those two passions in her life.

"I'm a curious person. I just want to know everything," said Wed, a biology major who has been active in the college's Molecular Science Club, Muslim Student Association, and Interfaith Coalition for Peace and Justice, and has served for two years as president of the Muslim House. "I could be in a classroom, and I think about the building: 'Oh, how did this person put the cement blocks in there?'"

"It's the same thing with genetics. It just sparks in me." In fact, Wed joked that she has spoken so often about this topic on campus that when someone says "genetics," she automatically turns around.

"Being in the lab is one of the times I feel that I am myself," Wed explained. "I feel like God is there, and I am there in that space. The lab bench is really like a mosque to me. When I am in lab, I worship God in a different way that is very precise — it's very close to me. When I was in high school, we did not learn about evolution," she said. "I grew up in Yemen, a very conservative Muslim country." But at UWC, she began to discover natural science; and at St. Olaf, where the campus environment continued to encourage exploring new things and thinking critically, she found her path.

"I identify as a Muslim scientist," Wed summed up. "Because I get to learn about God by learning and observing nature."

Rowing Across the Atlantic for UWC

UWC changed his life. To give others the same chance, Terence Steinberg (USA, UWC Adriatic, Macalester '11) will soon put his life on the line in a project he's calling the United World Challenge.

Terence will set out in December to row some 3,000 miles as a solo competitor in the Atlantic Challenge, a race from the Canary Islands to the Caribbean. His goal is to spotlight UWC's global impact and raise scholarship funds for new students. “We need UWC more than ever — not just the alumni change-makers, but the schools themselves showing the world that peace is possible,” writes Terence, who is supported by a team of UWC alumni managing the project, including Taylor Howard (USA, UWC-USA, Dartmouth '08). “Every ocean row is a team effort — even solo crossings.”

A senior consultant with Deloitte Consulting in Boulder, Colorado, Terence has been deeply involved in endurance sports since 2008. He has completed over 40 marathons, two Ironman triathlons, and ultramarathons — and soon, his first rowing race. He's new to rowing; but “the biggest contributors to an ocean rower's success,” Terence says, “are having a learner's attitude and purpose greater than self, two things UWC instilled deep within me.”

The United World Challenge will make use of an array of technologies to broadcast Terence's challenging experience into classrooms and living rooms around the world. “I hope spotlighting UWC will make a real difference.”

Spreading Math Passion in Mexico

As a public-school student in Guadalajara, Mexico who loved math and wanted to compete in national competitions, Cuauhtemoc Cruz Herrera (UWC-USA, Macalester '19) approached several private schools that had math clubs. "They turned him away," Macalester writes. "But Cruz Herrera studied and after months of hard work, became the only public-school student from [the state of] Jalisco to attend the national competition in 2008."

At college, Cuau founded the NGO Integración-Matemática, "to help future students who want to pursue advanced mathematics avoid the hardships that I faced," he writes. "If we make students aware of their capacities to learn by themselves with few resources, we can maximize their opportunities. We can create a generation of self-driven learners who develop problem-solving mind-sets and may go on to pursue careers in STEM."

A grant from Macalester's Live It Fund enabled Cuau to offer Integración-Matemática as a summer program for 38 students from 10 schools in summer 2016 — and his students won four gold medals in Jalisco's biggest math competition.

"We grew to 150 students and 42 schools last year, all from the city of Guadalajara," Cuau writes. This academic year he finished college early, so he could return to Mexico and become director of science and mental skills at Jalisco's State Ministry of Education. "Now, as part of the government, we are planning to have 690 students from 1,000 schools, from the 12 regions of my state. Since my first summer program, I've tried my best to get funds and resources so more students can be part of this project."

PRESIDENTS' PERSPECTIVES

"A rigorous liberal-arts education allows us to understand the world in all its dimensions — which means learning from and with people whose experiences of that world are often vastly different from our own, and span languages, cultures, and geographies. As our world becomes more and more connected, and as the distances between nations and peoples seem to shrink, it is ever more important that we create sites for learning that reflect our new global age. The Davis UWC Scholars Program allows Bennington College to be one of those sites — a space where debate and collaboration can happen in ways that prepare students, wherever they are from, for a future in which a sort of global fluency will be necessary to ensure their success."

PRESIDENTS' PERSPECTIVES

“Brown’s partnership with the Davis United World College Scholars Program is a natural extension of the university’s mission to prepare the absolute brightest students for leadership as truly global citizens. When we welcome Davis UWC Scholars to College Hill, our learning environment is energized and suffused with diverse perspectives and dialogue. As a result, everyone benefits, from our students and faculty to the community organizations we engage with throughout Providence and Rhode Island. We are honored to continue building bridges across both physical and cultural boundaries through this collaboration, and we are proud of the legacy of achievement and service that these scholars are forging beyond Brown’s gates.”

Working to Build Modern Systems in Nepal

Because his nation is still developing the expertise needed for major infrastructure projects, Kevin Lal Shrestha (Nepal, Li Po Chun UWC, Franklin & Marshall '16) works with his father, Prabin Shrestha, as consultants and representatives for foreign firms involved in the projects.

“My father has been consulting and representing foreign investors, contractors, equipment manufacturers and engineering companies for the past 40 years,” Kevin writes. “We have been involved in many sectors, including energy, telecommunications, civil aviation, engineering consulting, management consulting, and enterprise resource planning. Since I started working for the business, I have been consulting for an Indian transmission-line company. We have secured contracts and have already started building transmission line in the Koshi corridor, and for the power evacuation of Tanahu Hydropower plant.

“Similarly, I am working closely with a Chinese engineering and design company, Changjiang Survey Planning Design & Research Co., the company that designed the famous Three Gorges Hydropower project in China.” That firm is pursuing several projects in Nepal. In addition, “we are consulting for potential Chinese investors who are pursuing large storage-based hydropower projects in Nepal.

“We also attended a conference in Beijing hosted by the Nepalese embassy. The Ministry of Energy took a high-level delegation to Beijing to invite Chinese enterprises to invest in the hydropower sector in Nepal. We made a presentation with our Chinese partners to that delegation in Beijing.”

PRESIDENTS' PERSPECTIVES

“It is impossible to enumerate the many ways in which our Davis United World College Scholars contribute to Bucknell and our institution’s mission. These individuals are among our most engaged and motivated students, and they offer diverse perspectives that enrich our community’s understanding of global society. I am inspired by their aspirations to make meaningful positive differences in our community and beyond. Bucknell is deeply grateful to the Davis family’s generous support of this program, which quite literally changes the lives of these young people and the countless others who benefit from their passion, leadership and service.”

PRESIDENTS' PERSPECTIVES

“The United World Colleges enroll an extraordinarily diverse group of international students who not only excel academically, but also experience environments committed to inclusion, intercultural understanding, compassion, service, and more. As a result, they come to universities with the knowledge and skills to have a positive and meaningful impact on every campus. Case Western Reserve University is honored to be a partner institution of the Davis United World College Scholars Program.”

I Just Want to Make a Difference

Before she entered UWC, Lidia Mandava (Mozambique, Waterford Kamhlaba UWC, Cornell '20) thought she was headed for a career in science or engineering. But “the community service aspect at Waterford — and just the community — made me realize how much I wanted to focus on international relations,” she says, “and how policies and law can have a great impact on communities.”

At Cornell, Lidia is a founding board member, now president, of the university’s African Development Association. She’s also a member of the Black Ivy Pre-Law Society and the International Student Union, and last summer she became a research assistant for Sabrina Karim, an assistant professor of government.

“The task was to see the ‘before’ and ‘after’ of peacekeeping within Rwanda — how the genocide affected the military development and reform systems,” Lidia explains. She said she has learned how important security is for development. “Before, I always thought of the economy and education; but there’s no point in having all that if the state itself isn’t secure.”

Looking ahead, Lidia hopes to have a positive impact back home.

“I have really been interested in how people can make an impact on communities, and looking at how laws can protect vulnerable communities,” she says. “The main thing for economic and political development in Mozambique is human development, and you can’t have human development if laws do not protect the community.

“So my career goal at this moment is to have a future where I can practice human-rights law. I just want to make a difference. I know this path might change — but my end goal is to have an impact on my community.”

PRESIDENTS' PERSPECTIVES

“Colby is grateful to have been one of five pilot institutions with the Davis UWC Scholars Program, and for the Davis family’s enduring commitment to bringing exceptional students from around the globe to our campus. These students deeply enhance the classroom and residential experience at Colby, and their contributions extend well beyond campus through their research, internships, and international projects while they are here, and in communities all around the world once they graduate.”

PRESIDENTS' PERSPECTIVES

“We are thrilled that the College of Idaho continues its strong relationship with the Davis UWC Scholars Program. This year, we were honored to welcome a record 55 Davis UWC Scholars to the college, adding to more than 50 returning Davis students already on campus. In just one month, we have already felt their impact on campus through our first-year student overnight retreat in McCall, a recent city council meeting where first-year student Omotayo Akingba spoke in front of Caldwell city leaders, and most recently, at our inauguration ceremony, where over 10 first-year students performed dances from their home countries. We appreciate everything the Davis UWC Scholars Program represents, and are pleased to support the Davis UWC Scholars who choose the College of Idaho for their educational experience.”

GRADUATES IN ACTION

Applying Geoscience to Energy Development

“Math, computation and technology will forever add substantial value in safely unlocking the world’s vast amounts of energy resources,” writes Ricardo Kabila (Angola, Waterford Kamhlaba UWC, Connecticut College '13), who today applies some of those advances as a geoscientist/geophysicist with ExxonMobil.

After graduating from Connecticut College, Ricardo won a scholarship for graduate studies at the University of South Carolina, through the Institute of International Education’s ExxonMobil Angolan Scholars program. He completed his master’s in 2016, with a concentration in geological sciences/geophysics, then spent two years with ExxonMobil Angola.

“I joined ExxonMobil to help tackle the world’s most complex energy challenges, contributing to today’s and tomorrow’s energy needs and global development, hoping for a better, safer and more sustainable future,” Ricardo writes. From Angola he recently relocated to Houston, home of ExxonMobil’s corporate headquarters.

“A lot of the work that I do is using geophysics to help address some of the geological problems that we tackle,” he says. “ExxonMobil being an oil and gas company, a lot is focused on research and application of techniques that ultimately help with either the discovery, exploration, development, production, and/or economics of hydrocarbon resources.

“During these opportunities, I’ve had the privilege to see and travel the world, and experience life across multiple cultural settings. I have several other interests, like sports, volunteering/community service, networking, leadership, philosophy and God.”

PRESIDENTS’ PERSPECTIVES

“Earlham College, through the generosity of the Davis United World College Scholars Program, has been a home to many recent United World College graduates over the past decades. The Earlham, Richmond, and external communities are enriched by the contributions that Davis UWC Scholars make to society. Their involvement in athletics, clubs, leadership positions, research opportunities, and national and global issues contributes to the vibrancy and overall quality of the Earlham educational experience; and for that we are extremely grateful. Many of our community practices, including our campus convocations that are held throughout the semester, are quite similar to the traditions Davis UWC Scholars have experienced during their time at a UWC campus. Davis UWC Scholars enrich the Earlham community and, in return, Earlham College offers a variety of opportunities to our Davis UWC Scholars. Our faculty, staff, and students embrace and value this unique learning opportunity.”

PRESIDENTS' PERSPECTIVES

“As the 2018-19 academic year begins, international tensions seem higher than ever. There has never been greater need, as a result, for the globe-spanning friendships and multicultural understanding that the Davis UWC Scholarship Program produces. The United World College students at Lake Forest College inspire our entire campus — students, faculty and staff — as we seek to gain that understanding. We aspire to form and sustain a genuine international community that can serve as a model for the many different communities our students will enter after graduation, and we benefit every day from the examples that our UWC students provide.”

From Refugee Schools to the Ivy League

As the child of a Palestinian refugee family in Syria, Yamaan Attwa (Syria, UWC Dilijan, Princeton '21) has never set foot on his ancestral land.

Instead, he writes, “I inherited the social and economic status of Palestinian society in Syria.” So at Princeton, Yamaan receives many questions from American students — about both the Syrian civil war and the Palestinian-Israeli conflict.

“I am very supportive of these questions. There is a great curiosity within American students to learn about such situations from a witness, and that only reflects the appreciation of multi-perspectivism within U.S. colleges. I also find it very educational to hear the American perspective on things (not that there is a definite sole American perspective).”

In a letter to Shelby and Gale Davis, Yamaan said: “The scholarship you provided made it possible for someone who has been raised in UNRWA [United Nations Relief and Works Agency for Palestine Refugees in the Near East] refugee schools to attend the mathematics course taught by the legendary Charles Fefferman at Princeton University. For a long time, I naturally thought I would only see Mr. Fefferman through my laptop screen.”

As he prepares to major in mathematics at Princeton, Yamaan finds that “the academic atmosphere here is perfect, both for one to crystallize their field of interests and to keep their academic passion flaming.” He especially appreciates the chance to collaborate. At Princeton, he has been involved with the Princeton Arab Society, the Muslim Student Association and the UWC Club.

“It is of great importance to learn from passionate people,” Yamaan writes. “Yet it is of greater importance to learn with passionate people.”

PRESIDENTS' PERSPECTIVES

“The mission of the United World Colleges, one that celebrates diversity in education and the courage to change the world, is central to its community. The same holds true at Macalester College. We often hear from the Davis UWC Scholars that they come to Macalester, in part, because of their drive to live a mission central to their aspirations for their future careers and their impact on the world. We are fortunate to have so many of these students among our ranks. Their dedication and self-determination is contagious and benefits us all.”

PRESIDENTS' PERSPECTIVES

“This marks our 19th year of having Davis UWC Scholars on campus, and I cannot imagine what Middlebury would be like without them. They bring wonder and a worldly wisdom to our community, and are always willing to share their experiences with others. Through their diverse academic achievements, leadership in student government and organizations, and in the thoughtfulness and compassion they exhibit as volunteers on campus and beyond, Davis UWC Scholars model 21st-century citizenship. It is a pleasure to know these inspired young people.”

PRESIDENTS' PERSPECTIVES

“We have long held that a diverse campus community raises new generations of global citizens — the kind of open-minded and well-rounded thinkers and innovators we urgently need to build a better world. MIT’s Davis UWC Scholars come from every corner of the globe and are essential to our efforts to expose our students to a variety of viewpoints, backgrounds, and approaches to problem solving. Inside and outside the classroom, Davis UWC Scholars lead and contribute, and create a richer student life and learning experience at MIT.”

A Role Model in Cambodia

He’s been on leave this academic year from his job as Cambodia’s deputy chief of the ASEAN (Association of Southeast Asian Nations) Office at the Ministry of Commerce — but Imsouchiiv “G.V.” Suos (Cambodia, Li Po Chun UWC, Luther ’15) continues to be a busy man.

He’s pursuing a master’s degree in economic development and policy at the University of Manchester in the UK. “I have also been serving as a youth leader/ambassador in various international programs,” he writes, “such as SSEAYP (ASEAN and Japan), YSEALI (ASEAN and USA), as well as serving in other regional and national youth-led organizations, including the 2030 Youth Force Cambodia (UNDP), where I am currently an advisory board member.”

In his government post, “I’ve been working on various ongoing negotiations of different regional free-trade agreements, including the Regional Comprehensive Economic Partnership (RCEP), which is now considered as the biggest mega-free-trade agreement. This important agreement will impact billions of people’s lives.”

A Khmer Times profile last year noted that he grew up, in Phnom Penh, in an underprivileged family that believed in education. Asked his message to today’s young people, he said: “I believe that there is no specific time to pursue your goal ... you should always go for it, as there’s really no complete readiness or perfection.

“If you succeed in pursuing your goals,” he added, “do not forget to return to your home country and contribute to its progress.”

PRESIDENTS' PERSPECTIVES

“The Davis United World College Scholars Program expands students’ understanding of different cultures and countries by creating opportunities for them to live and learn with peers from around the world. We are deeply grateful that Shelby Davis, who celebrated his 60th reunion as a Princeton alumnus in 2018, chose his alma mater as one of the pilot schools from which he launched this extraordinary enterprise. Since then, hundreds of Davis UWC Scholars have enriched our campus by sharing their experiences, exchanging ideas with their classmates, and broadening the perspectives of all Princetonians. Thanks to Shelby Davis and his tremendous commitment to cross-cultural understanding, students are better prepared to serve as leaders in their communities, their countries, and the world.”

PRESIDENTS' PERSPECTIVES

“All of us at Ringling College of Art + Design are incredibly proud and delighted to be part of the Davis UWC Scholars Program. The tremendous energy and exemplary qualities the UWC students provide to our campus are of utmost value to our entire institution and community. Indeed, this unique group of students continuously helps raise the bar for all student performance on campus. A premier part of Ringling College’s mission is to foster globally aware citizens who become the creative leaders of tomorrow, and our participation in this progressive program helps us to attain and achieve this goal at a higher level.”

A Public-Housing Expert on Wheels

The summer before Linda Worden (Canada, Pearson UWC, Williams '19) was to begin a junior year abroad at Oxford University, a fire took 72 lives in West London’s 24-story Grenfell Tower apartment building.

Linda was already interested in issues involving urban life, housing and housing insecurity; for previous projects, she had interviewed public housing residents in Brooklyn and young people struggling with housing issues in her native Vancouver. The Grenfell disaster, she says, “really got me thinking about how the world can be built in such a way that such things can happen. That got me really interested in citizen participation, particularly in housing policy and community policy.”

At Oxford, she studied housing policy and volunteered with the Oxford Homeless Action Group, and with a student campaign against homelessness. Back at Williams, her senior thesis work focused this year on tenant participation in housing management in the UK — and she was named one of 100 Rhodes Scholars from around the world for 2019.

Linda will return to Oxford this fall, to pursue an M.Phil in comparative social policy, with a focus on citizen participation in policy formation. In 2019, she will be one of just 11 Rhodes Scholars from Canada. “I expect to write my dissertation on citizen participation in housing policy,” she says.

“We think of Linda Worden as a natural leader, poised to effect social policy reform in Canada one day,” says Williams President Maud S. Mandel. “Already she counts as an expert on public housing in almost any room.”

Linda also hopes to return next fall to playing roller derby. “I discovered that at Oxford,” she says. “Not at the university — in the town. I can’t wait to graduate and be someplace where I can play it.”

African Answers for an Energy Crisis

With phone-charging costs alone nearly 400 times higher than in the U.S., “rural sub-Saharan Africans, most of whom live on less than $1 U.S. a day, also face some of the highest energy fees in the world,” writes Paul-Miki Akpablie (Ghana, Li Po Chun UWC, Colorado College '16). “Death and poor health have accompanied the energy crisis.... As recently as last year, three babies died in Ghana because the hospital couldn't keep the ICU ventilators on.”

Paul-Miki grew up reading and studying by candlelight. While still at Colorado College, he started a business that aims to “address an African issue in an African way.” Kadi Energy won first place in Colorado College's 2015 Big Ideas Competition — and today, based in Ghana, it is marketing “sustainable, reliable and grid-independent energy solutions,” according to www.kadi-energy.com. Paul-Miki continued to serve as CEO this year, while he also worked toward an M.B.A. at Stanford.

Manufactured mostly in Africa, Kadi's products include a line of portable, solar-powered energy storage devices that can charge from two to 50 mobile devices at a time. The company also offers proprietary software that enables mobile phones to monitor data consumption, power charge, temperature, weather, and payment processing.

Nearly all Ghanaian adults depend on cell phones — a recent survey found that in a nation of 29.6 million, some 29 million people use 34 million of the devices. Kadi's products use top-quality batteries and are built to last far longer than competitors'. Paul-Miki's firm is training young Ghanaians to market the devices—“to become part of the energy solution Africa needs.”

PRESIDENTS' PERSPECTIVES

“Since its inception, the Davis United World College Scholars Program has accomplished tremendous good across the world by transforming the lives of thousands of young people. Skidmore's Davis UWC Scholars have enriched the college by bringing their unique experiences and individual perspectives to our community. In doing so, they have helped us advance a major strategic goal: fostering a global perspective for all our students. We are enormously grateful for their presence and for the support of the Davis Foundation.”

“The 2018 UWC Day theme of ‘Inspire Change’ captures the powerful impact that the Davis UWC Scholars have on our campus community at St. Lawrence. Whether in the classroom, a study-abroad program, a conference presentation, or a student event, the scholars challenge us to dig deeper for understanding, to view the world through a multitude of perspectives, and above all else, to celebrate richness of diversity and our common humanity. In teaching, learning, and living, they inspire change for the better.”

An EcoRep Helps to Clean the Green

Not every college student can say that by the end of their first year they had been part of making a visible difference on campus. But as an EcoRep intern for the Dartmouth Sustainability Office, Meriem Fouad (Morocco, Red Cross Nordic UWC, Dartmouth '21) and three fellow interns carried out a recycling campaign for food containers that's preventing up to seven tons of waste annually from going to the landfill. Their initiative has eased the problem of overflowing trash cans on the Dartmouth Green.

Meriem Fouad

The Courtyard Café, a popular facility that faces the central lawn, was going through seven tons of nonrecyclable food containers each year. Meriem's team worked with Dining Services administrators to bring the café into Dartmouth's Green2Go program, which was already supplying the main dining hall with strong plastic containers that are collected after use, sanitized and reused.

"The café introduced the reusable containers early in the spring term," the college says. "The EcoReps also curated an Earth Week art exhibition that featured works incorporating trash as a primary medium and theme, highlighting global struggles with pollution and waste management."

"Even though the impact is noticeable," Meriem writes, "obviously it is not going to drastically change Dartmouth's carbon footprint. For my team and me, this is also about educating our peers. If we can turn students' daily experiences in the dining halls into an opportunity to learn about how individuals can make small changes that matter, that's already a win."

As a Muslim Arab female, Meriem brings a new perspective to classroom discussions — she believes that not trying to address any preconceptions is the best way to break through them. "Being myself is the best gift I can give to this community," she reflects.

PRESIDENTS' PERSPECTIVES

“Our University of Richmond community is enriched by the extraordinary Davis UWC Scholars we welcome to campus each year. These global citizens encourage their classmates to view the familiar with new powers of inquiry, and to embrace cultures and perspectives that differ from their own. We celebrate with pride, as well, our many campus scholars who have earned Projects for Peace grants, including 2018 recipient Mike Kitimet, who is using his grant to establish the first library in his hometown of Kiserian, Kenya. The library will provide 600 elementary and middle-school students with increased access to books and other learning materials, which Mike believes ‘will build their capacity to be a positive force for equality of opportunity, personal development and economic advancement, which are all factors that are preconditions for peace.’”

PRESIDENTS' PERSPECTIVES

“Having long welcomed and served Davis UWC Scholars here at Wartburg, I have always been impressed by their commitment to civic engagement on both a local and a global scale. When I visited a UWC for the first time last year, I understood more fully how the UWC movement inspires and equips these young people to make the impact that they do. What a benefit they are for our campus and, after graduation, for the many communities that they join and strengthen!”

PRESIDENTS' PERSPECTIVES

“Wellesley College is proud to be one of the first five institutions to partner with the Davis United World College Scholars Program. Since 2000, Davis UWC Scholars have arrived on campus with diverse talents, experiences, and ideas that enrich our classroom learning and community dialogue. They bring to Wellesley a unique and valuable perspective and leave with the education and skills they will need to shape a better world.”

A Better Deal for Female Coffee Growers

“Women own 25% of the world’s coffee farms and make up 70% of the workforce in the coffee-growing process,” writes Abhinav Khanal (Nepal, Pearson UWC, Earlham ’16). “Yet they earn 39% less than their male counterparts, have lower yields, and are regularly challenged with lack of finance and gender-based discrimination.”

“This is the status quo that we are disrupting at Bean Voyage.”

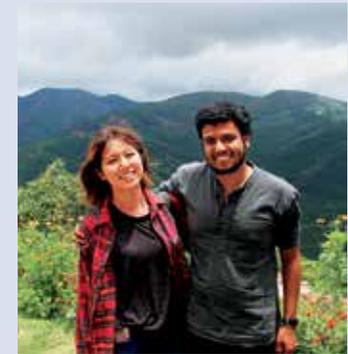

Winner of the 2018 Grand Prize in the Facebook Social Entrepreneurship Awards competition, Bean Voyage is a Costa Rica-based nonprofit founded in 2016 by Abhinav and SungHee Tark (South Korea, Mahindra UWC, Earlham ’16) with three fellow Earlham students.

The company’s “Care Trade Program” provides direct-to-consumer market access to women coffee growers who operate small holdings, plus a training on producing coffee that is both environmentally sustainable and more profitable.

“Each producer graduates as a Care Trader,” SungHee writes, “and is able to enroll into the Bean Voyage e-commerce platform to sell their coffee directly to consumers around the world. By eliminating intermediaries, our graduates are able to earn at least 200% more income than fair trade prices.”

The program has so far graduated 47 producers. Over the next three years, Abhinav, who manages fundraising and outreach, and SungHee, who runs training and evaluation while working toward a master’s at the London School of Economics, hope to reach 1,500 more female coffee growers.

Top Prize in the Facebook award competition gave Bean Voyage $55,000 worth of Facebook ad credits, plus mentoring from Facebook’s global marketing VP.

Making an Impact with Affordable Ingenuity

One good example of what excites Marta Manzin (Italy, UWC in Mostar, MIT '19) about her work at MIT's Little Devices Lab is the water- and blood-testing device she helped to make that's built into a stapler.

The Little Devices team is developing new ways to produce items that people in developing countries often need but can't afford. "We try to rethink the process — to think about it from a different angle," she explains.

"So this summer I was working on a photospectrometry test for glucose in blood, and for contaminants in water. We had a simple chip and a couple of small, 3-D-printed parts, and we mounted the whole thing on a stapler. A stapler has this nice up-and-down motion, which allows us to perfectly align the lenses of the photospectrometer.

"The really cool thing is, you can buy a plastic stapler anywhere. So to send one to Honduras, or Brazil or Puerto Rico, we just ship a little envelope with the chip and a couple of really small plastic parts, and they can make their own. I feel like I am having a real impact."

Marta, who grew up in a small village in northern Italy, also helped design a four-day orientation for new international students at MIT. "There's an imbalance," she observes, "between figuring out your academic life and your everyday life — where am I going to get warm clothes? What am I going to eat? I've been through that. I came to the U.S. with one piece of luggage."

"I've also made a lot of American friends," she adds. "It's important to explore new friendships, to explore this new culture that is welcoming you."

Helping Africa's Youth Find Answers

While he was earning a 2014 master's degree in teaching at Smith College, Mopati Morake (Botswana, Li Po Chun UWC, Williams '11) mentored inner-city youth in Springfield, Mass. and taught history at a Northampton high school. Then he joined the faculty of the African Leadership Academy, a highly selective, residential secondary school outside Johannesburg, South Africa.

As the school's current head of writing and rhetoric, Mopati joined two other faculty members in developing Omang, an interdisciplinary first-year course. Omang means "Who are you?" in the Setswana language.

"When students come to ALA, they encounter a community that boasts a diversity of ideas, nationalities, spiritual backgrounds, and sexual identities," Mopati explains. In the course, through writing, exploring, debating and creating, they explore their own identities and what it means to be an African today. "They can leverage their diversity of experiences to better understand themselves," he observes.

"The problems that we face in Africa are going to be solved by thoughtful, compassionate and committed people working together to solve complex problems," Mopati adds. "If we can figure out how to do that in our classroom, we are better able to do that on our continent." As a teacher, Mopati says he thinks often about politics, and about the limited ability of governments to make the changes that people hope to see. "What is needed for South Africa's renewal is a social contract," he said in a recent commencement address. "South African to South African. Person to person."

"The foundation of a just society is the relationships that you will forge, built on mutual respect and dignity," he told the graduating students. "It's how we act in these small moments that matters. That's where social justice is born, that's where love lives."

Applying to Become a Partner School

The Davis UWC Scholars Program reviews requests on an annual basis from colleges and universities interested in becoming partner schools. To be considered, a letter of request from the institution's president should be submitted, explaining in detail why their school would be a good candidate for the program. An important prerequisite for a candidate school is to have a proven track record of successfully recruiting graduates from United World College schools at the time of application. It's essential that applicant schools are in alignment with the Davis UWC Scholars Program's key goal of the internationalization of the U.S. undergraduate experience by building clusters of globally aware UWC graduates on their domestic campuses. Letters may be submitted at any time during the academic year, but no later than May 31, as decisions will be finalized by August each year.

The Davis UWC Scholars Program makes grants to institutions only — not to individual students. Grants are awarded based on financial need to eligible United World College graduates enrolled at one of the partner schools.

How Other Philanthropists Can Invest

Philanthropists who want to help bring the world to U.S. campuses — especially their own alma maters — are invited to become a part of the Davis UWC Scholars Program. Philanthropist Shelby Davis created the program 19 years ago, and since then it has grown to become the world's largest international scholarship program for undergraduate study.

Ninety-six American colleges and universities have been selected to partner with this major philanthropic investment to transform American campuses by providing scholarships to students from more than 164 countries to attend these schools for their undergraduate degrees.

The scholarships are awarded to students who are proven winners. As 15- or 16-year-olds, they won national competitions in their home countries that allowed them to complete their last two years of high school at one of the premier United World College schools. They have demonstrated their leadership, they are informed and engaged in world issues, and they have been admitted to some of the finest institutions of higher learning in the U.S. Everyone at these campuses — students, faculty, staff, and the surrounding community — benefits from this exposure and the global networking that will inevitably link our country's future leaders with those of many other nationalities.

The Davis United World College Scholars Program is a genuine partnership — Davis philanthropy provides $10,000 or $20,000 per scholar per year of need-based aid for up to four years of undergraduate study to each of the partner schools. Schools with 40 or more scholars enrolled on a continuing basis receive the larger award because they have demonstrated their complete strategic commitment by hosting such a large cohort.

The partner schools are left to fund the remaining financial aid for each scholar. Depending on the student's demonstrated need and on each partner school's full fees, the remaining scholarship packages can be quite substantial.

Other philanthropists have already chosen to participate. They have invested in a proven and exciting global program by cofunding a portion of these scholars at their alma maters or at other partner schools of particular interest to them. This opportunity exists for you as well. Share a naming opportunity for a scholar and his/her four-year undergraduate degree with a commitment of $10,000 or $20,000 a year. Your philanthropy, in concert with Davis philanthropy and your favorite school, will help create a three-way partnership for a better world.
