UNITING THE WORLD

Twenty Years of the Davis United World College Scholars Program

Twenty years ago, philanthropist Shelby Davis and veteran international educator Phil Geier teamed up to create what has become the largest privately funded international scholarship program in the world for undergraduates. Their vision was simple: invest in greater global diversity at American college and university campuses through need-based scholarship support for graduates of the now 18 United World College secondary schools around the globe. Their program was designed to expand educational opportunities for highly motivated students from throughout the U.S. and over 150 other countries, to foster friendships and build networks between these future decision makers, and to help make American campuses more representative of the wider world into which all students will be heading, competing, and coexisting in the 21st century.

To test their design, Davis and Geier started a pilot program in 2000, partnering with five American colleges — Princeton, Middlebury, Colby, College of the Atlantic, and Wellesley — benefiting 43 students from 31 countries. These pioneers graduated in 2004 having brought a new dimension to those college campus communities. The president of College of the Atlantic characterized the program as having “ignited an intellectual fire that transformed our institution more profoundly than any other single event in our history.” The president of Middlebury put it this way: “The Davis UWC Scholars are absolutely essential members of our robust global community and have been ever since the first year they arrived at Middlebury. They bring to campus a special optimism, fine-tuned during their years at United World Colleges; high academic ability and standards; and thoughtful leadership. Our Davis UWC Scholars offer daily examples of what it means to strive to be our best. We learn from them, and they from us, and we become lifelong partners in improving our world.”

With the pilot program well tested and affirmed by 2004, philanthropist Shelby Davis was ready to fund its growth. Geier, who had been president of UWC-USA since 1993, turned his full attention to leading the expansion as the program’s executive director, headquartering the program at Middlebury College in 2005 and building the program through partnerships with now nearly a hundred American colleges and universities. In this 2019-20 academic year there are 3,400 Davis UWC Scholars, and cumulatively there have been over 10,000 such scholars.

At this 20th anniversary benchmark, co-founders Davis and Geier have confirmed their ongoing commitment to sustainment and further growth of the Davis UWC Scholars Program.

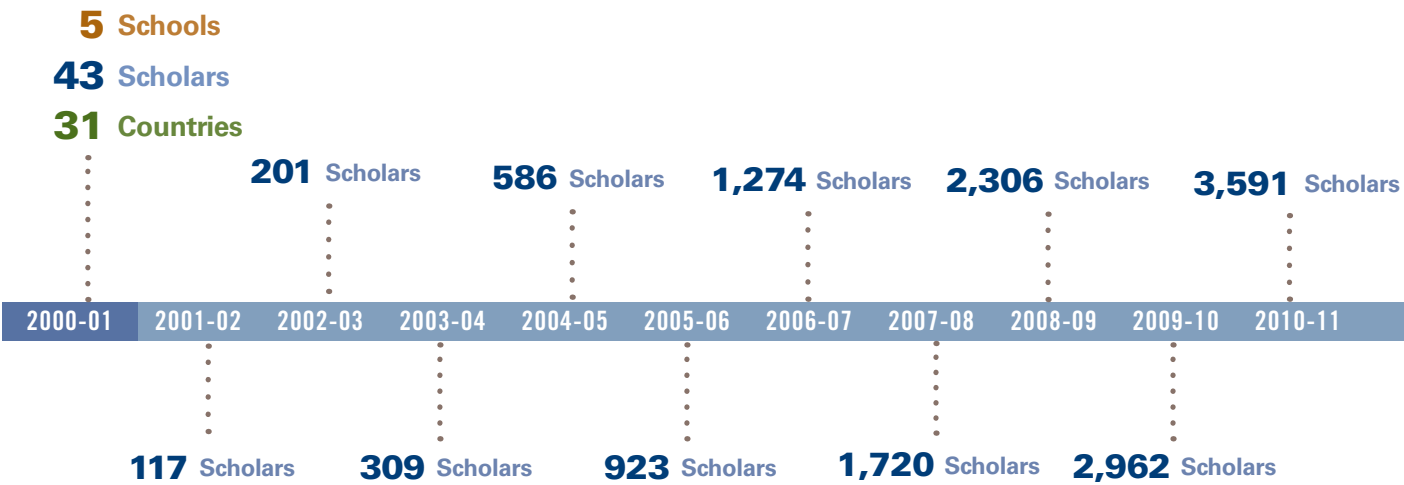

Davis and Geier remain committed to the program’s five main goals:

- » provide scholarship support for exemplary and promising students, from a wide range of countries and cultures, who have absorbed the passion and mission of their UWC schools for building international understanding;
- » build meaningful clusters of these globally aware scholars within the undergraduate populations of selected partner colleges and universities across the U.S.;

- » help transform the American undergraduate experience through international diversity and intercultural exchange — as much for the large majority of traditional American students as for the scholars;
- » leverage the value of this philanthropic initiative — to the long-term benefit of all learners and their teachers — to contribute to strategic shifts in institutional thinking, and to bring greater resources to the effort; and
- » contribute proactively to the well-being of our volatile, highly interdependent world by expecting our scholars and those with whom they interact to take personal responsibility for helping shape a better world.

The Davis UWC Scholars Program is at once practical and inspirational. It reflects the huge potential of private philanthropy to promote international understanding in dynamic, expanding ways, through educational institutions that share its strategic vision and are committed to building greater opportunities for global engagement for all their students. In essence, the program is about using philanthropic leadership to leverage additional support for transformative impact on individuals, institutions, and the wider world.

Twenty Years of Program Growth

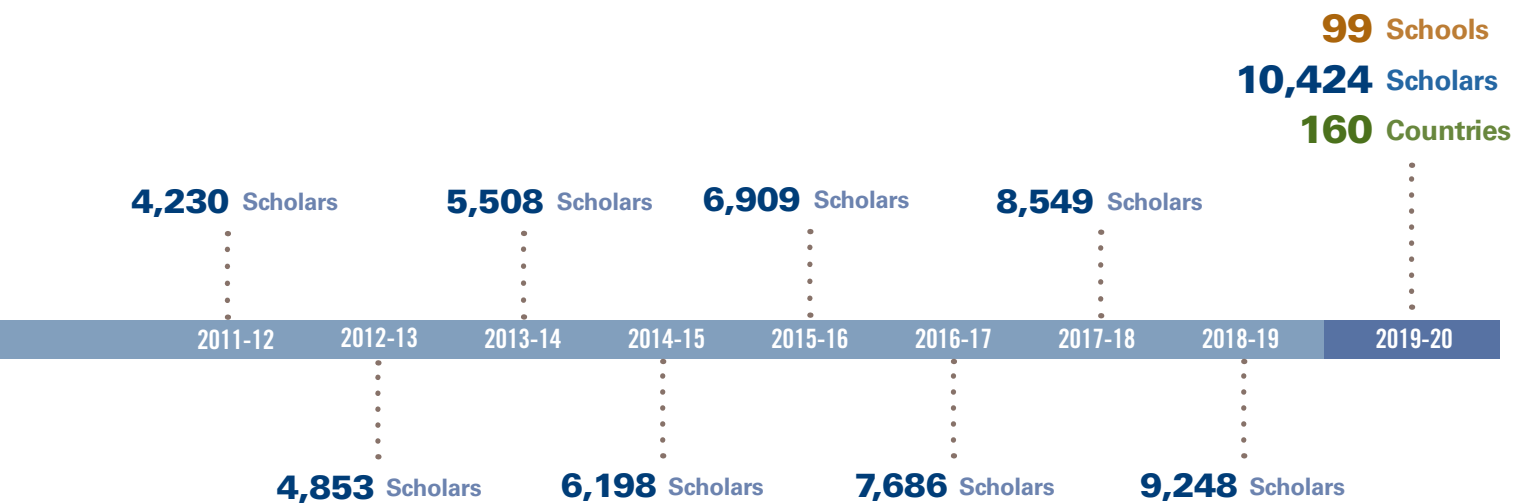

How This Works

Since 1962, thousands of young people from 175 nations have been selected by committees in their home countries to complete their last two years of high school at one of 18 United World College schools. UWC schools are located in Armenia, Bosnia and Herzegovina, Canada, China, Costa Rica, Eswatini, Germany, Hong Kong, India, Italy, Japan, Norway, Singapore, Tanzania, Thailand, the Netherlands, Wales, and the United States. The UWC movement works to build multinational, cross-cultural communication and understanding among all its students.

In 2000, the Davis United World College Scholars Program began providing scholarship grants to a pilot group of American colleges and universities to support UWC graduates who matriculated at these schools. These pilot schools — Colby College, College of the Atlantic, Middlebury College, Princeton University, and Wellesley College — are graduating their 17th class of Davis United World College Scholars in 2020. Based on the success of building clusters of globally minded scholars at these pilot schools, Davis philanthropy chose to greatly expand the number of campuses and scholars in the program.

This academic year, there are 99 U.S. colleges and universities in partnership with the Davis United World College Scholars Program. For partner schools, the program provides annual grants in support of need-based scholarships for each matriculated UWC graduate for up to four years of undergraduate study. The total number of Davis UWC Scholars attending these schools has now reached 3,407 from 160 countries. The 2020 graduating class includes 749 students from 127 nations. To date, the program has supported 10,424 scholars.

With their education made possible through their own merits and the help of the Davis United World College Scholars Program and its partner schools, Davis UWC Scholars will go on to play important, meaningful, often leadership roles in their communities, in their home countries, and in the world. The partner schools will have become more globally engaged and more internationally diverse educational communities.

Davis UWC Scholars by Class Year*

The College of Idaho Wins Davis Cup

The College of Idaho has won the Davis Cup for the first time in the cup's 20-year history, and with it, recognition as the American school with the highest enrollment of first-year Davis UWC Scholars. "We are thrilled to win this honor and so grateful for the tremendous support and vision provided by Shelby Davis and Phil Geier," said co-presidents Doug Brigham and Jim Everett. "They have helped change the culture on our campus to be one where everyone has a global mindset, and that helps not only our Davis students, it helps our students from Idaho and the western United States."

"We are extremely proud of the College of Idaho for its deep commitment to the twin objectives of our program—to provide scholarship support for deserving students and to help our American partner schools like The College of Idaho to globalize their campus communities," said Davis UWC Scholars Program founders Shelby M.C. Davis and Dr. Philip O. Geier. "It is impressive for such a relatively small partner school to bring in 69 first-year students, exceeding the totals of over 90 partner colleges and universities across the U.S."

"Our first class that arrived in 2007 was only six students, so to see it grow to the level it is today is particularly rewarding," said the college's VP of Enrollment Management Brian Bava. "This growth also demonstrates how building a sustainable community of international students over time has attracted more students each year, culminating in this year's record enrollment."

The Davis Cup win by the College of Idaho is significant considering its total enrollment of just 1,091 students. In the fall of 2019 there were 172 Davis Scholars enrolled at the college and they represent 74 different countries.

We Are a Happy Team — Reflections on Visiting UWCs

By Shelby Davis

On our trip to four UWC schools last fall, as I usually do, I reminded students of our Davis family road map for life's journey: for 30 years focus on learning, for the next 30 years focus on earning, and for the last 30 years or more, focus on returning for the betterment of the world you leave behind.

I also talked about my two careers — my investment career first, and for the last 20-plus years, my philanthropic career. In both, I had a tremendous tailwind and have been incredibly lucky.

During the last 25 years of my investment career, the stock market went up tenfold and the money rolled in. In my philanthropic career of 20 years so far, we have built a UWC scholarship program that keeps growing and getting more expensive, and the money is rolling out. But that is as it should be. When I say this to students, I usually get a nervous laugh, so I have to quickly reassure them that their education is secure and will be for the foreseeable future.

In philanthropy, I was extremely lucky early on to meet my partner, Phil Geier, who was the head of the UWC school in the United States. He has a Ph.D., had been an international educator and knew instinctively what was coming. He is also an incredibly hard worker and we meshed well together as we designed a scholarship program in the year 2000 for all UWC students.

Once again, we got a tailwind as educators everywhere in the United States wished to globalize their campuses to prepare their students for a global workplace and lots of disruptive change as new technologies went mainstream.

And again, we were in the right place at the right time with a delivery system of UWC students from 160 countries who all spoke our native language, English, and had graduated from UWC schools with an International Baccalaureate degree.

Transformational philanthropists Gale and Shelby Davis

We encouraged all UWC graduates who desired to come to our United States partner colleges and universities — now over 90 — to apply and, if they got accepted and applied for need-based financial aid and matriculated, we would be part of their financial aid package.

They do all of this on their own. We help fund their undergraduate scholarships at each institution and continue doing so for up to four years. The program took off and has grown annually. This academic year will see almost 1,000 first-years arrive on partner campuses versus 43 when we started 20 years ago. Cumulatively, we have supported almost 10,500 students; most have graduated or are in college now.

In my investment career I made it a habit to visit companies we were invested in to check up on our investments. Phil and I annually visit UWC schools all over the world and universities in the United States. It is an old habit, but we find it keeps us energized and engaged and more optimistic about our world as we strive to make a difference. Also, the presidents, deans, and professors praise these students for leadership and reliability, and their ability to mix with others and take advantage of all that is offered, while becoming role models for others. I hear this often and gratefully thank them for making the two founders look so good! We are sure they will be a force for good in the world whatever they do and wherever they live. Students tell us over and over that their UWC experience was lifechanging and an education like no other.

They want to live by UWC's mission statement, which says it all: "UWC makes education a force to unite peoples, nations and cultures for peace and a sustainable future." Already we see our graduates in action with countless examples of them giving back to help our world. We feature some in all our annual reports.

It is certainly true that education keeps getting more expensive and this program rises in cost annually. We have no plans to stop our growth. And very long term, I dare to dream that someday a UWC graduate who has hit it big time and gotten a big monetary tailwind will join us in this effort. When all is said and done, it makes a lot of sense because, after all, every student had two parents! In the meantime, I encourage them all to get the good habit of saving and giving back annually any way they can, to their alma maters who — along with their own hard work — got them this far. It is the right thing to do.

We look forward with confidence and are gratified daily by the stream of letters coming from our students expressing thanks and sharing their hopes and dreams. We are a happy team.

PHILANTHROPISTS HONOR ROLL

The Davis UWC Scholars Program combines the transformational philanthropy of the Davis family with donations from many others to our partner colleges and universities. Given this financial partnership, we are pleased to recognize their generous support for today's scholars and tomorrow's leaders. Each partner school was invited to submit the names of those they would like listed in this report along with the Davises. This effort at donor recognition only scratches the surface of the many who give to their alma maters in support of the financial aid awarded to our scholars. We are grateful to those who are contributing to their schools in this way, and look forward to the continuing growth of this honor roll in the years ahead.

This recognition is arranged by partner school with the information they provided. It captures the growing number of philanthropists captivated by the value of supporting our scholars — and theirs — by investing at their chosen college or university. Some have given to annual funds, indicating their interest in the Davis UWC Scholars Program. Others have given larger amounts ($10,000 or more) toward their alma mater's portion of a scholar's total financial-aid package and have been assigned scholars, sharing naming opportunities with the Davises. A few have given major endowments in support of international scholarships assigned to Davis UWC Scholars and share naming opportunities with the Davises each year. At the heart of the Davis UWC Scholars Program is “giving back,” a trait we strive to see manifested over time in our scholars as they make their way in the world.

Where the Scholars Come From

The Davis United World College (UWC) Scholars are graduates of a family of worldwide schools that share a mission of making education a force to unite people, nations and cultures for peace and a sustainable future. The UWC movement was founded in 1962 and now comprises a network of 18 international schools on four continents, short courses and a system of volunteer-run National Committees in more than 155 countries.

UWC offers a challenging education to an intentionally diverse group of students, placing high value on experiential learning, community service and outdoor activities and complementing high academic standards delivered through the International Baccalaureate (IB) Diploma Program.

Today, more than 10,000 students from over 160 countries are studying on the UWC campuses. Admission to a UWC school is independent of socioeconomic means, with over 80 percent of UWC National Committee-selected students in the IB diploma program receiving full or partial financial support.

Graduates of the UWCs are eligible to become Davis UWC Scholars at nearly a hundred college and university campuses throughout the U.S.

The UWC Schools

UWC Adriatic, founded in 1982 near Trieste, was the first UWC outside the English-speaking world. The school's buildings and residences are spread throughout the Italian-

Slovene village of Duino. All students study Italian, and participate in a social-service program with the local community.

UWC Atlantic College, the first UWC, was founded in 1962 in the 12th-century St. Donat's Castle on the south Wales coastline. The college places a strong focus on community service with a wide range of opportunities open to students.

UWC Costa Rica, near the capital San Jose, is UWC's only bilingual school, teaching the IB in English and Spanish. It became a UWC in 2006, and its approach is built on peace, environment, and multiculturalism.

UWC Changshu China opened in 2015 and offers a two-year IB diploma program as well as a one-year pre-IB preparatory program. Changshu is located in Yangtze

Delta, in the Suzhou metropolitan area. The vision of the first campus in mainland China is to become a sustainable village dedicated to the fostering of peace and international understanding.

UWC Dilijan opened in 2014, with generous funding from the RVF Foundation. The campus is set on 88 acres of land backing onto a beautiful national park. The educational program is diverse and engages with both the expansive setting and the local community. The college builds upon the movement's legacy of engaging with postconflict zones to create dialogue and a peaceful future.

UWC East Africa was established in 1969 in Moshi Kilimanjaro as International School Moshi (ISM) and opened a second campus in Arusha in 1987. In August 2019, it welcomed its first cohort of UWC students as the second UWC school on the African continent. It is the oldest school in Africa to offer the International Baccalaureate Diploma Program (IBDP). Located in the mountainous northeast of Tanzania, the school offers unique outdoor experiences that train the students in teamwork and leadership skills.

UWC ISAK Japan admitted its first students in 2017. The school was founded by an alumna of UWC Pearson College and offers an innovative leadership program integrated into all aspects of life including academics, cocurricular activities, and the residential experience. Students also have the opportunity to study Japanese language and to explore Japanese culture, history, and traditions.

Li Po Chun UWC of Hong Kong, founded in 1992, emphasizes the Chinese traditions of proper conduct, practical wisdom, appropriate social relationships, and respect for academic learning. Li Po Chun has developed strong links with various parts of the country, especially for service activities.

UWC Maastricht was founded in 2009 in the Netherlands through the merger of two international schools. It is the third UWC school that educates younger students, along with teaching the IB diploma.

UWC Mahindra College, founded in 1997, is in a rural area of the western Ghats near Pune. The school has dedicated much of its land to a biodiversity park and conservation reserve, which is a study resource for all local schools and colleges. Mahindra also supports local schools with its educational program, Akshara, and community-service projects.

UWC in Mostar, founded in 2006, is the first UWC with the explicit aim of contributing to the reconstruction of a postconflict society, in this case Bosnia and Herzegovina. A diversity of students from the country, the region, and abroad live, study, and volunteer together in the community, offering the host nation a working example of integrated education.

Pearson College UWC was founded in 1974 on Vancouver Island in British Columbia, Canada. The floating marine-sciences center contains a well-equipped seafront environmental-systems lab, and students conduct research above and below water at nearby Race Rocks, an ecological reserve managed by the college.

UWC Red Cross Nordic opened in 1995 on Flekkefjord in western Norway. Both regional and Red Cross traditions are reflected in the school's emphasis on Nordic studies and humanitarian and environmental concerns. Cooperation with the Red Cross creates service opportunities in areas such as first aid, lifesaving, youth training, and humanitarian action.

UWC Robert Bosch College opened in 2014 in Germany. Built thanks to the generosity of the Robert Bosch Foundation, the campus is a former Carthusian monastery in Freiburg. Recognized as a “green city,” it’s suited to the college’s emphasis on environmental sustainability and how technology can be used and developed to build a peaceful and sustainable future.

UWC South East Asia, founded in 1971, is the largest UWC school, with about 5,389 students ages 4–18 at two campuses in Singapore at full capacity. The school's global-concerns program introduces concepts in leadership and organization, and all students are encouraged to develop their own initiatives along with doing community service.

UWC Thailand is situated in northern Phuket, Thailand. Representing 65 different nationalities, it is a truly international community dedicated to the mission of making education a force to unite people, nations, and cultures for peace and a sustainable future. Students seek to realize their highest human potential, cultivate genuine happiness, and take mindful and compassionate action.

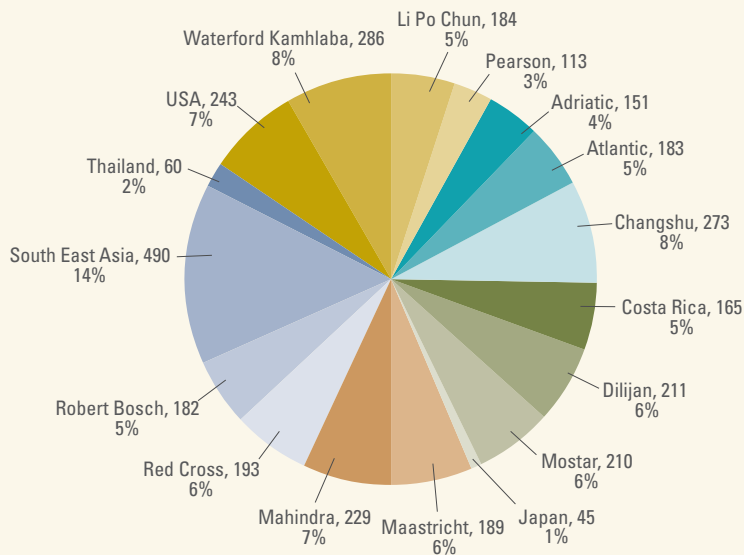

UWC-USA was founded in 1982 on the site of historic Montezuma Castle near Las Vegas, New Mexico. Programs emphasize community engagement, wilderness experience, service, and Southwest studies.

Students also study intercultural communication and mediation through the Constructive Engagement of Conflict (CEC) and global-issues programs.

Waterford Kamhlaba UWC became a UWC in 1981 and educates students ages 11–18. Just outside Mbabane, the capital of Eswatini, the UWC is a pan-African institution with a global outlook. Students and staff are committed to understanding and addressing the complex challenges facing Africa and the rest of the world.

GRADUATES IN ACTION

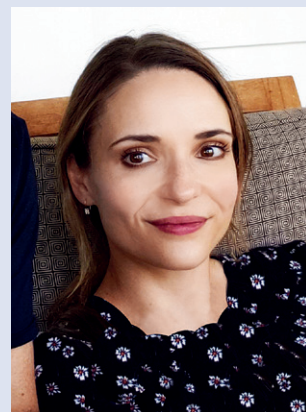

A Scientist Advancing Cancer Treatment

A cure for lung cancer is still in the future. But at the Harvard lab that Magda Bahcall, Ph.D. (Czech Republic, UWC Atlantic, Wellesley '05) directs, a team of researchers is working hard to improve patients' chances of surviving.

"There's been a lot of progress made in the development of specific, targeted therapies for different subtypes of lung cancer — however, the success of these drugs is almost always temporary," explains Magda. "Most patients eventually develop resistance; essentially, the cancer cells adapt to circumvent the effects of the drug and resume dividing. So the fundamental focus of research now is to devise therapeutic strategies to prevent the onset of resistance, or at the very least delay it."

After earning a doctorate at Columbia in pathobiology and molecular medicine, Magda joined the laboratory of Dr. Pasi Jänne at the Dana Farber Cancer Institute/Harvard Medical School in Boston. She rose to be lead scientist, and then became director of the lab, where she manages its staff of about 15 researchers.

"I've picked up a lot of skills in this position that I did not have when I was a staff scientist," Magda reflects. "I still very much enjoy doing science and contributing to making scientific advances, so I continue to have research projects that I work on personally. But being in a position that allows me to see the bigger picture exposes me to a wealth of ideas, then requires me to synthesize all that information, and has been very satisfying."

A Rhodes Scholar Hopes to Help Rebuild Syria

When Yale announced that Marwan Safar Jalani (Syria, UWC in Mostar, Yale University '20) had been awarded a Rhodes Scholarship for at least two years of study at Oxford, Marwan said: "I will go as a Syrian, proud of my identity, proud of my people who have endured so much, and hopeful about a future for Syria."

The first Syrian student from Yale to win a Rhodes, Marwan plans to pursue an advanced degree in comparative government, building the skills he'll need to help create a future for his country. Raised in Damascus, he escaped Syria's civil war with his family in 2012, then lived in Egypt and Turkey before attending UWC.

As an undergrad, Marwan has worked at Integrated Refugee and Immigrant Services in New Haven, and for the Bronx Defenders and Human Rights Watch in New York City. He was president of the Yale Refugee Project and served on the UWC Syrian National Committee. His senior thesis examined the lessons learned by civil-society organizers in countries like Bosnia and Herzegovina that, like his, have been riven by conflicts between "people who perceive themselves as different from each other."

"I think those are lessons we can use to design a future for civil society in Syria," Marwan says. "We have to imagine a future for the country, because we cannot afford not doing that."

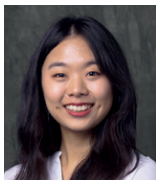

"I have to utilize the resources that are being provided to me to contribute to that future — because other people in Syria don't have those resources."

A Future in Positive Youth Development

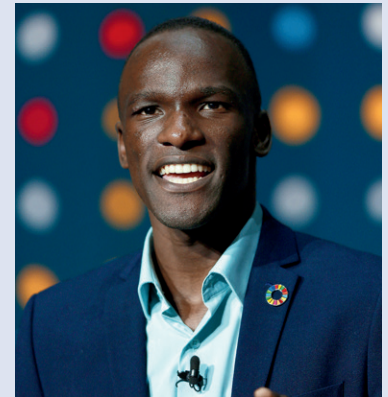

“There’s no day that goes by without me thinking about the challenges my generation and younger are going to face, with climate change, increasing inequality, increasing migration,” says Andrew Nalani (Uganda, UWC-USA, Dartmouth ’16). “I ask myself, what is the role of education in empowering young people to meet the challenges of the 21st century?”

As he works toward a Ph.D. as a Steinhardt Fellow at NYU, Andrew is involved with the Listening Project, a program that is helping students and teachers at New York City middle schools “develop the kinds of relationships that are based on common humanity, rather than through a set of social stereotypes,” he says. He’s also part of SAFE (Systems Aligning for Equity) Spaces, which brings trainings in suicide prevention to staff at city youth detention centers.

Andrew founded the African Youth Leadership Experience, which in 2014 and 2017 brought young people together for a summer-camp program in his home country. In 2018 he joined the heads of state of France, Norway and Sierra Leone in speaking at a Goalkeepers event in New York, which focused on progress toward meeting the UN’s Sustainable Development Goals.

“My general field of interest is positive youth development,” Andrew says. “My dissertation is going to focus on the contribution of youth/adult partnerships — the way that young people and adults work together with shared power.

“I don’t know where I will make my home eventually. But I see my work being cross-cultural and international in nature.”

Reaching Out for Kids and Community

Having been involved since her first year on campus with Colby Cares About Kids, which pairs students at the college with young people in local schools, Pinyi (Irene) Zhang (China, UWC Atlantic, Colby College '22) grabbed at a chance to be a summer program assistant for Colby STARTALK. That's a summer day camp, funded by a National Security Agency grant, in which professors in the Chinese Department use art to teach Chinese language and culture to local elementary-school children.

"The approach that we took was immersion-type language learning. The teachers only used Chinese with the students," Irene explains. "Every day we would lead them to do some form of traditional Chinese art, like making stamps, puppet theater, and landscape drawing using Chinese paintbrushes. I developed pretty strong relationships with the students, which was exciting. I hope to teach in the future, so it was good practice for me."

Through Colby Cares About Kids, she spends a couple of hours each week with a fourth-grade girl in a Waterville school.

"It's mostly about spending time, talking with them and telling them there's a lot of possibilities in life."

A double major in anthropology and education with a minor in East Asian studies, Irene is a regular host for Colby's International Coffee Hour, and she's a community advisor. "That's like an RA, but with a lot more responsibilities for building community," she says. "I wanted to work with the international population at Colby, and bring my own understanding of community to the college."

Working on Global Tech from Silicon Valley

It's a long way from Kathmandu, where she grew up, to Silicon Valley. But as she builds a dynamic career, Niyanta Khatri (Nepal, Mahindra UWC, Colorado College '17) is right at home in Palo Alto.

Working for Logitech, Niya is playing a key role as the firm expands into making and marketing devices for video collaboration.

"This division feels like a startup," she says. "You have to take risks, and I'm wearing a lot of different caps. I'm doing sales one day, then I'm traveling and doing partnerships with Microsoft and Google, and then I'm having calls with Asia and Europe, to set up this program there and see what the market looks like. I wake up every day and have no idea where today is going to go."

While at Colorado College, Niya helped to launch Ogugu, a startup that provides a smartphone-based platform to help small businesses in Africa improve inventory management. Niya has stepped back from day-to-day involvement in the young company, though she still helps to shape its sales and marketing work.

"We got accepted to an incubator in Tanzania, and they're helping us launch across East Africa," she says.

After graduation, Niya spent two years in Silicon Valley with ADP (Automatic Data Processing). Now with Logitech's videoconferencing division, "I'm one of the key players when it comes to go-to-market strategies," Niya says. "It's pushing me and challenging me, and I get to work with leaders. I think this will push me to move up really fast."

Blending Climate-Action Science and Policy

Agim Mazreku (Kosovo, UWC Adriatic, College of the Atlantic '20) is not waiting to work for positive change. In his home nation, Agim has been an intern in climate policy and science for the UN Development Programme. At CoA, he has worked as an analyst at the college's Community Energy Center, which helps local businesses, schools and farms conserve energy and find sustainable power sources. He was chosen to be one of 100 "Green Ticket" holders for last year's first UN Youth Climate Summit and UN Climate Action Summit in New York City. And he has attended several Conference of the Party sessions of the UN Framework Conference for Climate Change, as part of a CoA program in environmental policy.

"I'm designing my bachelor studies in a way that I get to learn the science, and also the policy, on climate change," says Agim, who speaks English, Albanian, Turkish and Italian. And even as he's earning his undergrad degree at CoA, Agim is also working toward a master's at Bard College in New York state.

"My vision is that I will be working in the policy world, both at a national and international level, as much as I can," Agim says. "But there is one thing I'm pretty sure about, and that is making sure that the world acknowledges and gets to know that Kosovo is a young, independent country, and that we deserve to be part of any international negotiations — not just on climate change."

GRADUATES IN ACTION

Back on Campus — This Time as a Professor

As a tenure-track faculty member in Colby's Psychology Department, Veronica Romero (Venezuela, UWC Adriatic, Colby '09) has returned to where she was a Davis UWC Scholar.

Veronica taught for two years after graduation, through Teach for America, at an elementary school in Washington, DC. She next earned a Ph.D. in experimental psychology at the University of Cincinnati, then spent two years in a visiting position at the College of Holy Cross before rejoining Colby.

"What I really like about Colby is that, at least in the Psychology Department, the relationships with students have always been very open and collegial," Veronica says. "It's always been a first-name basis. I'm very happy here."

Veronica pursues two lines of research: on the breakdown of social-interaction skills development in autism, and "to understand more generally how people interact with each other. The autism work is the more translational, in application, and the other is what we would call basic science — just to understand how this behavior of humans being social, and solving problems together, works."

Veronica often joins international student events, such as food festivals and the campus's Friday international coffee hour. "Most of that, I would say, is spearheaded by Davis Scholars," she observes.

"When you get to interact with people who didn't grow up the same way you did, or might have a different perspective, that opportunity is really great for everybody. It makes everyone more connected, and more conscious about how small the world really is."

Learning to Be a Teacher Who Connects

Martin Troska's (Czech Republic, Pearson UWC, Middlebury '21) dream of becoming a teacher began in frustration.

At sixth grade in Prague, Martin was unimpressed with his traditional school's expectation that students would copy down everything the teacher said, with little or no discussion. At UWC, "It was so interesting to focus on a specific topic and stay with it for a long time — reading articles, a range of things. I loved my teachers there."

As an education and history major at Middlebury, Martin has spent time observing a local high-school teacher. Preparing for a winter term to be spent student teaching, he guided an IB history class's discussion of Adolf Hitler's 1938 annexation of Czech Sudetenland.

Through the college's Language in Motion program, which brings Middlebury students with international experience into area classrooms, Martin has led discussions with elementary and high-school students on Czechoslovakia's 1989 Velvet Revolution, and on English in a global context.

After graduation, Martin hopes to teach in a public school back home. "I would like to be a teacher who pays good attention to the needs of students," he says, "and who keeps asking the question, 'How does what we're learning benefit them?'"

"That's what I really like about the teachers I've seen at Middlebury Union High School. They have a close relationship with students; the teacher knows what's going on with the student outside the class, as well. I think that's really healthy, in terms of building community. We're all humans — we're all living in the same place."

GRADUATES IN ACTION

A South African Entrepreneur with a Vision

An entrepreneur, innovator and development strategist in her home country, Pumla Maswanganyi (South Africa, UWC Maastricht, St. Olaf '16) has been nominated as one of the Most Influential People of African Descent by the organization of that name.

“Currently, I am chief innovation officer at Baobab Consulting, a strategic advisory and communications company working with leaders and organizations to amplify their impact on the African continent,” Pumla writes from Johannesburg. “I also serve at the chief strategy officer at Jara, where we are creating a personal, portable, solar- and crank-powered education technology device for children in post-disaster zones and refugee camps.” That project won Cisco challenges in both Australia and the U.S.

Pumla’s work has earned her a Forbes Fellowship, a Resolution Fellowship, membership in the African Women Leaders Network, and an invitation to join the 2019 UNLEASH Sustainable Development Innovation Lab, working toward UN SDG 9: Innovation, Industry and Infrastructure.

At the UNLEASH Innovation Lab in Shenzhen, China last year, she writes, “My team and I aimed to bridge the market access gap faced by rural women farmers in Uganda, by working on a mobile USSD micro-logistics platform that leverages transportation networks to enable the passage of produce to urban markets.

“Simply put, my vision is to attain and extend freedom in all ways: from increasing the socioeconomic freedoms of the marginalized, to rewriting the rules surrounding a traditional ‘career,’ to creating spaces that allow myself and others to achieve our dreams on our own terms.”

PRESIDENTS' PERSPECTIVES

"Amherst's motto, Terras Irradiant (Let them give light to the world), has taken on new meaning in recent years as our student body has begun more fully to reflect the talent that exists in every part of our society and across the world. We interpret the motto to mean that our students, graduates, and faculty should be sources of light who also see the light in others. Amherst values academic freedom, intellectual quality, openness, and respect. Our Davis UWC Scholars represent these qualities and their presence on campus makes the Amherst community stronger."

Building Awareness, Connection & Community

When Mauzay Dlamini (Eswatini, Waterford Kamhlaba UWC, College of Idaho '20) first came to the college, “There was a clear divide between American and international students,” he says. “Not enough mixing and learning was happening.” He began hosting Diversity Night events — and as a senior, he has been president of the college’s Oxfam club, which is linked to Oxfam International’s efforts to combat injustice and poverty.

“I saw the opportunity to lead Oxfam as a way to raise awareness about the issues faced around the world to the student body,” he says. “I also saw it as an opportunity to highlight the poverty and social-justice issues faced by people in Idaho.”

At home, Mauzay notes, “We have high levels of poverty and unemployment, and that has always been an important issue for me and my people, which is why I also study international political economy.

“I have been focused on getting American students involved a lot more, because I notice they live in a bubble and have little knowledge about the issues in their state and around the world. I recruited American students at the club fair ... I also organized events, like our Oxfam Variety Show, to get American students excited and see that we can also be a fun club.”

Mauzay was selected as one of ten national Oxfam CHANGE leaders for 2019. And these days on campus, he observes, “The school is more together than I have seen it. I like to think I played a role in that.”

Celebrating the Davis UWC Scholars Program 20th Anniversary

Comments from Darron Collins, President and Alumnus, College of the Atlantic

College of the Atlantic is an institution shaped by fire. The Bar Harbor fire of 1947 inspired the need for an educational institution to help rebuild a devastated community here at our home on Mt. Desert Island, Maine. The Cuyahoga River fire and the metaphysical fires tearing the social and ecological fabric of the country in the late 1960s molded our mission. A campus fire in 1983 nearly ended our educational experiment and demanded a remarkable comeback. And then, the extraordinary vision and generosity of the Davis UWC Scholars Program ignited an intellectual fire that transformed our institution more profoundly than any other single event in our history.

This year we celebrate Shelby Davis and Phil Geier's pilot project to bring United World College students to five U.S. institutions of higher education: Princeton University, Middlebury College, Colby College, Wellesley College, and College of the Atlantic. Let's admit that COA lacked the size, reputation, brand awareness, and maturity of the other schools in the cohort. The Davis UWC Scholars Program took a chance on a small, young institution with an important and inspiring mission. That venture philanthropy changed what and how we taught, changed the way we thought about and consumed food in the dining hall, reshaped our conversations about diversity, equity, and inclusion, and revolutionized how we understood our place in the constellation of higher education. In a word, the Davis Scholars program completely internationalized College of the Atlantic.

The Davis UWC Scholars Program's mission is to "build cross-cultural understanding across U.S. campuses and ultimately throughout the world in this century. The stability of our world, and ensuring America's place in it, demand no less than an initiative this large in scale, innovative in design, and as powerful in impact." That mission and vision have also supercharged our ability to deliver on our mission: building a more sustainable, year-round community on Mount Desert Island and seeding the world with thinkers and doers with the intellect, creativity, and passion to make the planet a better place for humanity.

Since the start of the program 318 Davis scholars from 88 countries have come to the COA campus; but they also came to and transformed the MDI community as a whole. Davis scholars brought diversity to an island community that was somewhat culturally homogenous. Davis scholars worked with MDI high-school students to eliminate single-use plastics in Bar Harbor; they've joined scientists and scholars at the Jackson Laboratory to understand the genetic roots of addiction; they've volunteered to improve trails threading through Acadia National Park; they've become members of hundreds of local families through the COA Community Connections Program. The boundaries between the COA campus and the MDI community have always been porous, and that porosity has meant great things for our island home.

Those Davis scholars, equipped with the combined experiences of the United World College and College of the Atlantic, are now rebuilding primary schools throughout rural Nepal, shaping international climate diplomacy through the UN Framework on Climate Change, and designing the next generation of green buildings and homes. Considering the impact of the Davis UWC Scholars Program as a whole, with its 99 partner institutions and thousands of students from 164 countries, brings a monumental dose of hope in a world that desperately needs it.

"That venture philanthropy changed what we taught and how we taught, changed the way we thought about and consumed food in the dining hall, reshaped our conversations about diversity, equity, and inclusion, and revolutionized how we understood our place in the constellation of higher education. In a word, the Davis Scholars program completely internationalized College of the Atlantic."

PRESIDENTS' PERSPECTIVES

“As young people around the globe seek to tackle the most consequential challenges of our time—namely climate change, the rise of authoritarianism, and decades-long wars—it is critically important that they have the proficiency to collaborate with peers across geographic and cultural borders. At Bennington College, the convergence of varied experiences and perspectives has always been central to our trailblazing approach to the liberal arts, but it has perhaps never been more necessary than it is today. The UWC Scholars Program is an invaluable partner in our efforts to graduate future problem solvers, bridge builders, and peacemakers. It enables Bennington to be a place of rigorous debate and collaboration on issues of global importance, a place where students can come together to recognize humanity across differences and the intellectual potential in our divergent experiences.”

GRADUATES IN ACTION

A Ph.D. Candidate Works to Restore Sight

As a Ph.D. candidate in physics at Stanford, Bingyi Wang (China, UWC-USA, Williams College '18) is doing thesis work in “the field of brain-machine interface,” she writes from Palo Alto.

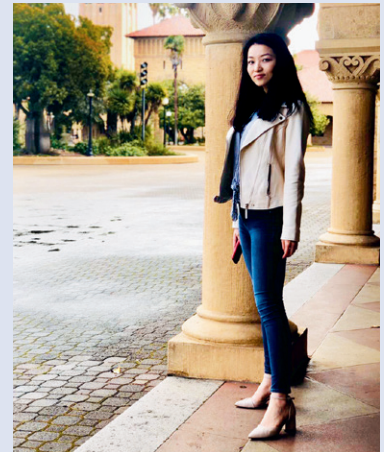

“In particular, I focus on retinal prosthesis development, aiming to restore sight for patients with AMD (age-related macular degeneration) in Prof. Daniel Palanker’s lab. My work consists of the design and fabrication of an on-chip prosthetic device, which is surgically placed in the subretinal space. The electronic device functions like photoreceptors that have degenerated for AMD patients, stimulating the rest of the neural circuits and transmitting visual signals to the brain.

“In collaboration with industrial efforts in Europe, we have shown promising success in clinical trials. I am dedicating to designing new generations of our devices, aiming to improve the visual acuity.”

Bingyi is a member of the first cohort of students who received a Knight-Hennessy Scholarship. The highly selective international program, founded in 2016, provides 100 students each year with full funding to pursue a Stanford graduate degree.

She’s also a musician, performing on the Chinese stringed zheng.

“I have been actively playing and performing, as well as leading an ensemble group of zheng,” Bingyi writes. “I have performed with the Stanford guzheng ensemble at the Chinese New Year gala and our dedicated annual concerts. As a soloist, I performed in occasions such as departmental celebrations, cultural exchange shows, and within Knight-Hennessy community.” She was honored with a Stanford Department of Music Award in spring 2019.

"Davis United World College Scholars contribute to Bucknell and our institution's mission in many ways.

These individuals are among our most engaged and motivated students, and they offer diverse perspectives that enrich our community's understanding of global society. Through meaningful work and a real commitment to a better world through cross-cultural engagement, Davis Scholars make lasting and positive differences on campus and beyond. Their passion, leadership and service raise our own aspirations, and the friendships they make with their classmates build the foundation for truly global citizenship. Bucknell is deeply grateful to the Davis family's generous support of this transformative program."

PRESIDENTS' PERSPECTIVES

"Colorado College's Davis UWC Scholars continue to amaze me as their impact on our campus grows every year. The 2019-20 cohort of Davis UWC Scholars is the largest yet with 19 incoming students who will leave their imprint on Colorado College and those who interact with them. The Davis UWC Scholars are a vital part of our community and often take on leadership roles, as they eagerly pave their paths in this interconnected world. As president, I take pride in these scholars, and I am so grateful to have the Davis UWC program at Colorado College."

Twenty Years of Learning from Each Other

Davis UWC Scholars Infuse Middlebury's Cultural Fabric

Nearly 500 Davis UWC Scholars have studied at Middlebury in the 20 years since the program began. The first Davis UWC Scholars brought a new dimension to the college community, one that continues to this day.

Ask professors about Davis Scholars, and they will recite a long list of names and recall interesting stories and anecdotes about the students, some from decades ago.

One of Middlebury's most celebrated examples is Yohanne "Kido" Kidolezi. Arriving on campus in 2001 from Tanzania and Red Cross Nordic UWC, Kido brought an exuberant enthusiasm with him that people still remember, and smile about. As a student, his work was exceptional, culminating in a research grant to investigate child labor in Tanzania. The Middlebury community was proud when Kido graduated with honors and went on to obtain an MBA from Northwestern Kellogg School of Management. And the community is proud of him today, as he works in the health-care field in Africa and Pakistan.

The fact is, Kido changed Middlebury.

He left something of himself behind, including a beautiful tradition from his home country that has become part of our community's fabric.

It began one day when Kido and his classmates were hiking on Snake Mountain. Kido began to run downhill while singing a song in Swahili. In his small town in rural Tanzania, schoolchildren run and sing daily, an activity called Mchakamchaka. He explained to his friend that the entire school would run and sing, and the older students would run with the younger ones and teach them the songs. His friend was intrigued and joined in. And Middlebury Mchakamchaka was born—a student group that meets after dark to run and sing.

Professor Karl Lindholm witnessed Mchakamchaka for the first time when walking to his car one night. A group of shadowy figures came toward him on Proctor Road “running at a fairly good clip, singing, out loud and strong, a rhythmic song. Their song, their activity, was a celebration, an unmistakably joyous sound cutting through the darkness and chill of a late February night in Vermont.”

Davis Scholars leave something of themselves behind.

An artist leaves evocative portraits of indigenous people on the walls of the Rohaytn Center; a brave journalist, who has risked her life to report about political peril and corruption in her home country, inspires Middlebury staff and alums who follow her stories with a mixture of admiration and angst; under the leadership of Davis UWC Scholars, the highly popular international student fashion show transforms over time into a showcase for the cultures of the international campus community, in the UWC tradition.

Each adds a brick to Middlebury's foundation, which reaches into the past and the future.

On campus: they come with skills to work across difference.

Middlebury Admissions recognizes that the Davis Scholars are likely to be resilient and more mature. "They have made adjustments that other students haven't," says Karen Bartlett, associate director of international admissions. "They have learned how to get along and how to push conversations forward. At UWC, they can't afford to lose friends over difference—they know how to deal with difference."

It is the general consensus that conversations taking place on campus are improved by Davis Scholars; whether with roommates, in student government, or in campus-wide discussions about important issues, Davis Scholars are practiced at listening and helping to hear each other.

These skills have proven essential as the college becomes more diverse. Middlebury's 500 Davis Scholars have helped to bridge geographic and cultural differences, while helping to make the college community more global.

In the classroom: they bring vitally diverse viewpoints.

When Davis Scholars' viewpoints are added to discussions, the discussions can be vastly enhanced.

Professors comment that Davis Scholars are among their most challenging and exciting students. Tamar Mayer, professor of geography, calls them risk takers, willing to engage in complex discussion for the sake of the discussion, not the grade. "The Davis Scholars I have had in my classroom have been interested in political and global issues in a way that many of my American students are not. This has made for excellent discussions. My courses always have had global orientation, and these students fit perfectly in them."

Middlebury + Davis Scholars = Optimism for the future

Davis UWC Scholars transform Middlebury with the impact of their talent, hard work, unique cultures, and their willingness to engage in mutual learning. One in three of our international students is a Davis Scholar, and their numbers ensure that they are a force for change and understanding at Middlebury.

If you ask Davis Scholars about Shelby Davis, they will speak in complete awe about how one person can change so many lives. Shelby made it possible for them to come to Middlebury to learn. They have earned our respect and their degrees, and they have returned so much to our community.

It has been a remarkable, wonderful 20 years.

"Davis UWC Scholars transform Middlebury with the impact of their talent, hard work, unique cultures, and their willingness to engage in mutual learning. One in three of our international students is a Davis Scholar, and their numbers ensure that they are a force for change and understanding at Middlebury."

A Passion for Science, and a Dream

“My big goal in life is to find a cure or a treatment for Alzheimer’s disease,” says Estella Tcaturian (Russia, UWC Robert Bosch College, Lake Forest ’21). Whether or not she gets there, she has made an amazing start.

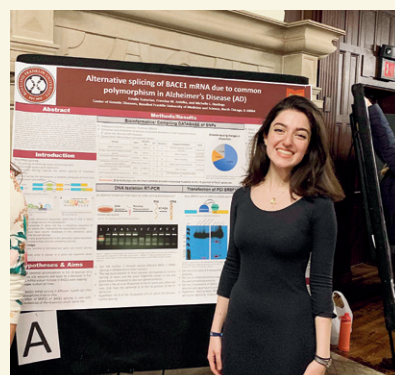

Estella, who is of Armenian heritage, is Lake Forest’s first double-major in neuroscience and chemistry. She’s treasurer of the college’s chapter of Nu Rho Sci, the National Honor Society in neurosciences, and of the American Society for Biochemistry and Molecular Biology chapter. She tutors fellow students in chemistry, biology and physics.

She has joined in research on Parkinson’s and on Alzheimer’s, cystic fibrosis, and other genetic diseases — and she and three fellow undergrads recently described their research on “the paradoxical effects of hints on memory” to the international meeting of the Psychonomic Society in Montreal.

“They did so well that everyone kind of assumed they were graduate students,” says Matthew Kelley, the professor in whose cognitive psychology lab Estella is a research assistant.

Estella discovered her passion for neuroscience as a first-year student, and declared it her major. As a sophomore she took two organic chemistry courses, and became a double major. She’s only disappointed that her double-major requirements won’t let her fit in advanced organic chemistry. “But I talked to my advisor, and asked if I could get the materials from lectures to study on my own.”

Even with all her other involvements, tutoring fellow students “truly makes me happy,” Estella reflects. “We all come and try to improve our weaknesses, and just enjoy each other’s company.”

PRESIDENTS' PERSPECTIVES

"Davidson College is reimagining the liberal-arts experience to cultivate in students the skills to address the world's most urgent issues and the courage to navigate the unfamiliar. To do so, the college offers talented students from all backgrounds unsurpassed preparation for a meaningful life of leadership and impact in today's interconnected and rapidly changing world. Intellectual discovery is best undertaken within a broadly diverse community, among people with different perspectives and experiences who bring a wide range of questions to the knowledge enterprise. Davidson celebrates difference while building a community united by talent and curiosity. That experience shapes in students the qualities desperately needed for global citizenship: intellectual curiosity, unquestioned integrity and fundamental decency. Davis UWC Scholars, with the gifts, worldview and life experience they bring, play a critical role in Davidson's ability to live out our mission. We are deeply grateful."

PRESIDENTS' PERSPECTIVES

"Franklin & Marshall is proud to partner with the Davis UWC Scholars Program as we seek to internationalize our learning community and develop responsible global citizens. Diversity is a necessary factor in developing analytical thinking, problem-solving tools, teamwork, and creativity. Therefore, Franklin & Marshall seeks to attract the brightest, most motivated students from every corner of the country and around the world. We value the unique perspectives of our Davis UWC Scholars. These exceptional students play an integral role in encouraging intercultural dialogue and creating connections to the rapidly changing global world."

Davis UWC Program Impact on Wellesley College

Comments from Tana Ruegamer, Director of Slater International Center and International Student and Scholar Advisor

For the past 20 years, the Davis UWC Scholars Program has supported Wellesley's commitment to international initiatives that help students pursue their place, purpose, and passion as engaged learners in a diverse and interdependent college and world.

As one of the five founding institutions in the UWC Program, Wellesley has welcomed 205 scholars from around the globe since 2000, and these bright students have added an important voice and perspective to our campus community. Like the Davis UWC Scholars Program itself, Wellesley is committed to developing critical thinking, celebrating diversity, and preparing students for leadership and service. The Davis UWC Scholars exemplify the talent, determination, and potential of a Wellesley student, and it is clear that Wellesley College is the place for them to build on their experiences in the Davis UWC Program. They come to the college with an understanding of the importance of diversity, a commitment to learning, and a desire to make a meaningful contribution to their world.

Wellesley's partnership in the Davis UWC program began when the college was undertaking a global-education initiative that sought to globalize the curriculum; make study-abroad programs and international internships more widely available; and recruit more highly qualified international students and support them financially. Today, the percentage of international students enrolled at Wellesley has doubled to 12.7 percent, up from 6 percent in 2000. The Davis UWC Program has been a critical partner in enabling us to bring the most talented international students to Wellesley, helping to diversify the student body, the curriculum, and students' ways of engaging with the global community.

Over the past 10 years, we've had 26 Davis UWC Scholars selected for the Madeleine Korbel Albright '59 Institute for Global Affairs. Through partnerships with a global network of some of the world's leading institutions and organizations, which serve as internship hosts for Albright Fellows, the institute encourages fellows to be active change agents. Students participate in full-time internships outside their country of origin, applying what they have learned in the classroom to gain hands-on experience. In so doing, they uphold Wellesley College's motto, non Ministrari sed Ministrare—not to be served but to serve.

The Davis UWC Scholars bring a passion for learning about the world. They ask critical questions as they consider the multiple perspectives involved in addressing global issues. The Davis UWC Scholars are known to be among the most inquisitive and reflective students in these special programs, and across campus. Through such reflection and active participation, our Davis UWC students transform the institutes and classrooms they engage with by heightening awareness of global issues and encouraging understanding in spaces throughout campus.

Wellesley's Davis UWC Scholars are first and foremost leaders, and you can see this in all aspects of campus life. During their time here they build relationships with their peers and faculty as they demonstrate a commitment to community, social service, and civic engagement. They are well represented in Wellesley's leadership and service programs, including the Global Engagement Awards Program, and their leadership with cultural and civic student organizations, including the Slater International Center. Recently, Wellesley's Davis UWC Scholars have created the Global Tea Series as a way to gather all interested students, faculty, and staff together to discuss issues important to them. Derived from the events and discussions that were a daily part of life at their United World Colleges, the Global Teas engage the campus community in an examination of important international issues. Scholars wanted to find a way to spread awareness about important international matters and, at the same time, make Slater and Wellesley more like their Davis UWC homes while transforming Slater's programming.

The Davis UWC Scholars Program is promoting international understanding at Wellesley and beyond as it helps our scholars pursue their place, purpose, and passion as engaged learners in a diverse and interdependent world. At Wellesley, our scholars join their peers to learn from one another, promote collaboration, create understanding, build community, and advance social justice and equity and they graduate as "Wellesley students," uniquely prepared to make meaningful and professional contributions to the world and to be major influences in it. All the while, transforming the Wellesley culture in positive ways.

Wellesley College is honored to be a participant in the Davis United World College Scholars Program. The Davis UWC Scholars bring to Wellesley intercultural skills, lived experiences, and worldviews that challenge our students, faculty and staff alike. At no point in time is it more important than in today's world to bring such perspectives and knowledge to the forefront. We are living in unprecedented times where global events directly affect local communities overnight. Where students need to utilize cross-cultural skills and engage in difficult conversations on a daily basis. Where becoming a citizen of the world is not an option but a necessity. We are proud of our Davis UWC Scholars as they will thrive as global leaders and global citizens. Soon enough we will all lean on them to help us shape and reimagine our futures.

Wellesley's Next Generation Leaders include numerous Davis UWC Scholars.

"Wellesley College is proud to be among the first five institutions that have partnered with the Davis United World College Scholars Program. These scholars offer contributions of all kinds, and help sustain and build upon Wellesley's standing as a community of women from across the globe who draw inspiration, support, and strength from one another and leave prepared to make their difference in the world."

GRADUATES IN ACTION

A Watson Fellow Digs into Urgent Global Issues

As she travels the world for a year on a Thomas J. Watson Fellowship, Moni Ayoub (Lebanon, UWC Adriatic, College of the Atlantic '19) has been digging for insight and understanding on the issues of human trafficking, domestic violence, refugees and vulnerable communities.

“My Watson fellowship was inspired by the many stories of violence, abuse, war, poverty, and human trafficking that I have heard, seen or experienced, and the importance of bringing voice to these issues,” Moni writes.

“My aim is to gain new approaches and perspectives that will guide my future work in Lebanon and in other countries.”

Moni’s plan calls for her to spend time in Tunisia, Egypt, Ghana, Argentina and Sweden. “I am now in Tunisia, learning and working on the connection of irregular migration to the issue of human trafficking,” she wrote at year’s end.

“Tunisia is a focal point of entry into Europe, which means there is a lot of migration. The process ... often puts many people in vulnerable situations. This leads to human traffickers exploiting and forcing people into child labor, forced labor, or sex trafficking.

“A truly remarkable experience was living with a family on the entrance to the Sahara in the south of Tunisia. I helped the family on their date farm and with caring for their camels and goats. Their humble essences, kindness, generosity, faith in the unknown, connection to mother Earth, and resiliency will be a light in my heart forever.”

Speaking Up as a Student Leader

“Josh stepped into leadership roles from the first moment he arrived on campus,” wrote Wartburg College President Darrel Colson in successfully nominating Joshua Voigt (South Africa, Waterford Kamhlaba UWC, Wartburg '20) to be a 2019-20 Campus Compact Newman Civic Fellow.

As student body president during his junior year, Josh “continued to facilitate dialogue and discussion on inclusion, race and diversity,” Colson wrote. “He identifies systemic challenges that make students’ lives more difficult, then he sets about to overcome them.”

“I have stepped down from a lot of the formal leadership positions I held last year,” Josh says, “but I’m still advocating, doing behind-the-scenes work, talking to people.” He has been especially active in advocating for ways to increase the representation of the college’s large community of international students, and to ease the challenges they often face.

“I’ve given talks to professors, I’ve advocated in front of the president and the Board of Regents of the college,” he says. “I felt it was my responsibility, as someone who is outspoken and passionate and driven, to try and solve some of these problems. I do have a very big voice, and I like to use it for the right reasons.”

“There’s no doubt in my mind that if I had not gone to UWC, I would not have been prepared to take on the challenges I’ve taken on here,” Josh reflects. That centers, he notes, on “standing firmly for what we believe in, and spreading ideas of acceptance and a peaceful global society.”

"A range of international challenges—from trade to refugees to war—continues to affect and trouble our world. None of these challenges are simple, and the resolution of any of them will require cross-cultural knowledge, understanding, and goodwill. No organization addresses this need more intentionally and completely than the Davis Scholarship Program. The United World College students that the program supports at Lake Forest College inspire and educate our entire campus. As we work to build and sustain a true international community on our campus, they are making enormous contributions to it. Our goal is for our campus community to serve as a model for the many different communities our students will enter after graduation. Thanks to our UWC students, I feel optimistic about our possibilities."

PRESIDENTS' PERSPECTIVES

"The relationship with the United World Colleges is one of the most precious things we have at Macalester. Davis UWC Scholars come here having already learned to be independent and encouraged to think of the world as an interconnected place. This idea, that we are all connected as citizens of the world, is a terrific thing, and it makes Macalester and the communities our scholars move into better for their presence. We are thankful that our scholars chose to come to Macalester and are proud to know them for the time they are here, and often beyond."

PRESIDENTS' PERSPECTIVES

"We have long held that our diverse campus community raises new generations of global citizens — the kind of open-minded and well-rounded thinkers and innovators we urgently need to build a better world. MIT's UWC Scholars come from every corner of the globe and are essential to our efforts to expose our students to a variety of viewpoints, backgrounds, and approaches to problem solving. Inside and outside the classroom, UWC Scholars lead and contribute, and create a richer student life and learning experience at MIT."

Incubating a New Business in Brooklyn

Within New Lab, a large business-startup incubator in the Brooklyn Navy Yard, Michael Eaton (Botswana, UWC Atlantic, Cornell '18) is working for Voltaic Systems. It's a young company that develops small-scale solar panels "for weird and wonderful projects and products," he says, "like bird tracking and agriculture."

"It's a small company, like 12 people. I primarily do design engineering and manufacturing, but all kinds of stuff; it's a lot of project management. I wanted to be in New Lab because I just love the idea of being around all these products and people that have genuine intention for their company. I find the people I work with and interact with here are honest about their intentions, and what they're trying to do — solve problems, follow their passions."

In his junior year at Cornell, Michael started Iko Systems, a company that created and marketed high-quality small hydroponic systems for growing food at home. He served as CEO for a time, but later passed on the firm to his co-founders, who moved it from Ithaca, N.Y. to Massachusetts and entered the marijuana business.

Outside his current work, Michael is passionate about urban design, especially bringing nature into the built environment, and about birding. "I'm a member of the New York City Audubon Society," he says. "Wherever I go, I take my binoculars."

"Sidewalks should have a strip for greenery, where animals can live and birds can thrive," he says. "I'm also pretty passionate about New York. I love Brooklyn."

PRESIDENTS' PERSPECTIVES

"Methodist University advances purposefully with a strong commitment toward the internationalization of our campus in our second decade as a Davis United World College Scholars institution. Davis UWC Scholars have made our international programs flourish and have become a keystone in our advancement toward national recognition as an institution of higher learning.

Davis UWC Scholars at Methodist University enhance our educational programs by sharing their experiences, knowledge, and hope for a better future. Methodist University counts on these future leaders to continue sharing their determined spirit and encouraging the growth of interest in courses related to social justice, international studies, law, education, and the environment as they have during these past 13 years. They have fostered student interest in working toward a more peaceful world and have taught all of us something about overcoming cultural and ethnic barriers. Davis UWC Scholars further global understanding at Methodist University!"

PRESIDENTS' PERSPECTIVES

"Global excellence is one of the pillars of a Mount Holyoke College education. With the second-highest proportion of international students of any liberal-arts college in the United States, we thrive on fostering an inclusive conversation on our campus around equity, diversity and difference. Our UWC Scholars add immeasurably to this dialogue. They come from underrepresented countries and arrive with deep appreciation for social justice. In turn, we help them carve out a path to leadership and influence that will make a difference. The world has never needed it, or them, more than now."

Tuning Her Campus In to the World

Aside from her academic work as a mechanical engineering major, Brishti Mandal (India, Mahindra UWC, Bucknell '20) has devoted her campus years to sharing international student perspectives, and to focusing all of her peers on the world scene and global events.

"Whatever opportunity I have to voice my opinion, or participate in a conversation that brings into perspective the voice of a non-American, of an immigrant American, or an international student, I try to go," Brishti says. "I go to speakers, I go to focus groups. I'm just constantly present."

She has been director of Common Ground, an annual, student-run diversity retreat; co-chair of the International Student Advisory Board; and co-creator of the board's series of "Fireside Chat" discussions of crises like the Hong Kong protests. As an RA, she has sought to raise global awareness within her dorm through emails, talks, and a news-focused bulletin board.

"I bring that kind of challenge to class," she adds, "where I'm questioning not just my peers but also professors and staff members. 'How can we change this? How can we push the boundary?'"

For her efforts, last spring Brishti received one of Bucknell's coveted Diversity Awards, whose nominations come from students and other members of the campus community.

"How do we keep ourselves in tune with what's happening in this moment out in the real world? That's been my focus," she sums up. "A human-rights crisis in any part of the world is a human-rights threat to every part of the world."

Opening School Doors for Kids in the Congo

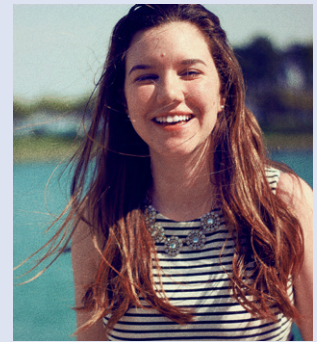

“The world is facing a huge learning crisis,” says Maroua Sallami (Tunisia, Li Po Chun UWC, Northwestern '16). The World Bank, where she works, estimates that 53% of children in low- and middle-income countries can't read or comprehend a simple story by the end of primary school.

One of those countries, Democratic Republic of Congo, is one of the few nations where primary education is still not free to families. Maroua is on the World Bank team developing a billion-dollar project aiming to change that — “to reduce the burden of school fees on parents,” she says, “and put in place critical reforms to reinforce education systems.”

Households in the Congo currently pay about two-thirds of the cost for their children to attend primary school. “Consequently, at least three million school-age children are out of school,” Maroua says, primarily because their families can't pay the fees. “This project is expected to benefit at least one million children from the poorest households ... 13 million primary students currently in school will also benefit from reduced fees.”

After earning a master's degree from Northwestern, Maroua joined the World Bank's Education Global Practice, which works to help countries reach the UN's Sustainable Development Goal 4: “to ensure inclusive and equitable quality education and promote lifelong learning opportunities for all” by 2030.

“With this pressing global demand for quality education,” Maroua says, “there is enormous potential for innovation. I believe that impact investing for developing countries' education systems is part of the solution.”

Finding Stories the World Needs to Hear

Catherine Cartier (USA, Pearson UWC, Davidson '20) keeps on building up adventures and experience in the Arab world.

She did a high-school year in Morocco, then spent the summer after her first college year at an intensive Arabic language program in Jordan. She returned there as a sophomore, studying at the Middlebury School in Amman and interviewing Syrian refugee women to collect their folktales.

"The displacement of Syrian communities to Jordan has transformed the themes and content of these stories, as well as how they are told," Catherine wrote in an article published by The New Arab in 2018.

The next summer, Catherine was in Lebanon as an Abernethy Fellow, interviewing artists about how art can play a role in healing from war's trauma. Last summer she hiked through Lebanon as a fellow with the Pulitzer Center for Crisis Reporting, talking with religious leaders and others about how religion connects with forest conservation efforts. She won a 2019 scholarship from the Harry S. Truman Foundation.

"She pushes herself out of her comfort zone because she loves knowledge," says Rebecca Joubin, a Davidson associate professor of Arabic studies. "She's also a very humble, genuine, good person. Her research has always been very connected to service."

Catherine wonders if she can build a future in journalism work that "could elevate the ability of people to be their own storytellers."

"I do see there's a need, not only for telling stories that aren't being heard in the United States, but also for rethinking how these stories are told."

PRESIDENTS' PERSPECTIVES

"Northwestern strives to be a place where students develop a global perspective and a deep appreciation of diversity in all its forms. Because that same ethos guides United World Colleges, Davis UWC Scholars have been perfect matches for our Northwestern community and have been instrumental in helping us build a distinctive, inclusive campus culture. The scholars I meet are always dedicated to making the world a better place, and I'm eager to see the contributions this new cohort of scholars will make toward that end."

Putting Financial Power into Africa's Phones

"We believe that poverty alleviation starts with financial inclusion," declares Emma Smith (USA, UWC-USA, Duke '16). She is the co-founder and chief operating officer of Eversend, a startup that offers Africans a mobile-phone-based "multi-currency e-wallet."

Over 66 percent of African adults lack a bank account, Emma notes, but nearly all have a mobile phone, and about half of those phones have a money account for simple domestic payments. "We thought: Can we create a platform for financial services more comprehensive, more complete, that integrates with mobile money operators and leverages their adoption?"

Eversend allows users to pay bills, buy insurance, build credit, and spend and send money from mobile phones at affordable rates. Launched in March 2019, Eversend had 24,000 users by year's end, and had handled over $1 million in 23,000 completed transactions. The company serves Uganda and Kenya, with plans for growing into Nigeria and Ghana early in 2020.

"It's taken a lot of wonder, wander, and failure to land up on Eversend," says Emma, who lived out of a carry-on suitcase for two years and "stayed on the couches of too many UWCers to count," traveling to over 25 countries in 2019. She was named to the 2019 Forbes "30 Under 30" list for technology in Europe.

"At Eversend, we are made up of Indians, Kenyans, Ugandans, Americans," Emma says. "Our investors are Swedish, German, American. My home is the people, nations and cultures that I work alongside for peace and a better future."

PRESIDENTS' PERSPECTIVES

"The fabric of our creative community is enhanced by the diverse experiences, backgrounds, perspectives, histories, and talents of our Davis United World College Scholars. Core to our mission is preparing students to be discerning visual thinkers and ethical practitioners in their chosen areas of art and design. Ringling College of Art and Design's participation in the Davis UWC Scholars Program aligns with that mission by helping to foster a multicultural conversation across our student body that breaks down boundaries and expands respect and understanding. Ringling College remains honored and proud to be affiliated with the Davis UWC Scholars Program, and looks forward to getting to learn from each year's incredible class of scholars."

Helping Young People Learn to Make Change

“A lot of people in my generation have grown up looking at climate change, looking at the injustices that are happening. There is huge interest in my generation to do something,” notes Julia Schetelig (Germany, UWC of South East Asia, Earlham '21). “People my age often have that motivation, but don’t often know where to start. That energy isn’t really turned to something.”

To help guide and inspire that energy, Julia created the website generimpact.com.

“It’s a resource platform,” she says, “from apps that take a few minutes to organizations you can volunteer with. If you have an idea to start your own initiative, here are some sources of funding you can apply for; here are some crowdfunding tips. You want to make a difference — here are all the different ways you can.”

Her project has its roots at UWC, where Julia got involved with Sky School, a UK-based nonprofit that has worked with UWC South East Asia to develop a secondary-school diploma program for young refugees around the world. Julia joined in a “hackathon,” she says, “getting together a syllabus that would give refugees the skills to create initiatives within their community. They could look for scholarships, funds or apps that help you change the world.”

On Earlham’s campus, “I don’t see myself as Julia the leader; I see myself as Julia, your friend. I hope I can be there for you, and help you become the leader you want to be.”

"The Davis United World College Scholars Program serves as a beacon of light to everyone committed to international education and global leadership. Through this highly successful program, the founders' vision of international understanding and transformational philanthropy translates into practical advances in peace and global understanding across the world. Here at Skidmore College, the program has served as a cornerstone of our advances in undergraduate international education and, as a vital component of that goal, to bring highly qualified international students to the college. We are tremendously grateful for the vision, generosity, and commitment of the program's founders."

Educating Future Leaders Around the World

In 2000 when Colby College was invited to become one of five partner institutions to pilot the Davis UWC Scholars Program, we could not have predicted the impact it would have on Colby or on higher education throughout the United States. Over the last 20 years Colby has welcomed hundreds of incredibly talented students from a broad range of the United World College campuses and each one of them has arrived on Mayflower Hill with a deep desire to learn and to lead. Our partnership with the Davis UWC Scholars Program has been integral to our efforts to enroll the most talented students from around the world and to build a community of globally minded students who will be the leaders of their generation. Approximately 300 Davis UWC Scholars have graduated from Colby since 2004 and have gone on to pursue graduate education and a wide variety of professions in fields such as education, banking and finance, business, information technology, government, public service, and health care.

Colby College class of 2004 Davis UWC Scholars joined by (front row, center) Phil Geier, President Bro Adams, Gale and Shelby Davis, and Amy Geier.

In the first year of our partnership with the Davis UWC Scholars Program, Colby received 55 applications from UWC graduates and 12 of those students went on to enroll in the Class of 2004. Applications for Colby's Class of 2023 numbered 164 and this fall we welcomed 14 of those applicants as first-year Davis UWC Scholars. Over that same period, overall applications to Colby have grown at an even faster pace. Just 10 years ago Colby's total number of applications for admission was 4,520 — 16 percent of which were international applications. In 2019 applications reached 13,584, more than tripling in the last decade, and of those 32 percent (4,401) were international applications. Our partnership with the Davis UWC Scholars Program remains critical to Colby as we continue to expand our reach to a broad global audience and develop a more culturally diverse student body.

At Colby we believe that we must not only enroll the most talented students from around the world but that we also have a responsibility to offer a curriculum that engages global issues, supports a campus culture that is internationally and globally focused, and ensures that every student has access to a meaningful global experience during their time at Colby. Our Davis Connects program, made possible through the generosity of the Davis family and trustee of its charitable foundation, Andrew Davis '85, LL.D. '15 in 2017, has allowed us to create a new and unique model for the liberal arts that integrates a set of universally available experiences into the academic program and ensures that global experiences are accessible to and expected of every Colby student.

It was an honor to be invited by Shelby M.C. Davis and Philip O. Geier to be one of the first Davis UWC Scholars Program partner schools 20 years ago, and it is an honor today to continue to be part of this program this has grown to include nearly 100 of the best colleges and universities in the U.S. and has benefitted thousands of talented students. Colby remains grateful to the Davis family and foundation for their trust in us to help educate and shape generations of future leaders around the world.

Shelby Davis with Colby students in the fall of 2013.

“Having Davis UWC Scholars in my classroom is among the most satisfying experiences of teaching at Colby. UWC students are not just smart, curious, and hardworking; they also are critically attuned to their own and others’ learning experiences. In the classroom, they work to bring everyone into the conversation because they know that their own education will benefit from this kind of mutual engagement. In so many ways, they raise the bar for everyone—me included. They keep me on my toes and that makes teaching a joy!”

—Mary Beth Mills
Colby College Charles A. Dana Professor of Anthropology

“I feel like I am in the unique position to give back to a whole new generation of students all that Colby gave to me. I owe much of my success today to the relationships I formed at Colby with peers, as well as faculty and staff. I would not have been able to accomplish as much as I have in my life if it hadn’t been for my experiences at UWCAD and Colby College.”

—Veronica Romero
(Venezuela, UWC Adriatic, Colby '09) Colby
College Assistant Professor of Psychology

“I’ve developed and maintained an open, judgement-free mind, and an inclusive philosophy. In everything I do, I try to maintain peace and work towards social and economic development of fellow human beings. The Davis/Colby years were instrumental in making me who I am today, and contribute in unquantifiable ways to the work I do and the support I can offer to others. I’ve never met the Davis family—but I am unequivocally and eternally grateful to them for their wisdom and generosity.”

Doing All She Can, and Then More

Sometimes Muskan Verma (India, UWC Atlantic, Bates College '21) wonders why she does so much, both on campus and off.

A double major in rhetoric plus film, screen studies and theater, Muskan has been a leading activist at Bates, where she has helped organize demonstrations, sit-ins and lobbying at the offices of Maine's congressional representatives. She's been Bates/Lewiston coordinator for the Sunrise Movement, a broad-based effort to combat climate change while creating good new jobs. And she recently joined other students at colleges across the U.S. in starting an initiative called South Asian Students Against Fascism.

"While I still wish I could do more, just doing this helps me sleep at night," Muskan reflects, adding: "I'm not making myself miserable trying to get things to change all the time. There are inspiring, important things I can find within Bates, especially community engagement."

She has been a student mentor in two local elementary schools near Bates, an after-school tutor at the Lewiston Public Library, and a volunteer at the local Humane Society. On campus she's involved with a number of clubs and coalitions, from International Club and the Bollywood club to student theater.

"I've always been told to compartmentalize, so my emotions didn't affect my academics," Muskan says. "But I'm starting to let myself understand that there will be times when I will have to choose between getting an A, or having a 4.0 GPA, and taking an action, mourn an injustice, or just take a moment to figure out my place in the world."

PRESIDENTS' PERSPECTIVES

"At our 2019 commencement ceremony, I had the honor of presenting St. Lawrence's inaugural Jeffrey Boyd '78 Prize to graduating senior and Davis UWC Scholar Tuma A. Koontse. The prize recognizes in the student recipient those qualities that distinguished the award's namesake: humble effectiveness, focused purpose, and inspired creativity. I see these characteristics embodied in many of our Davis UWC Scholars, who are motivated by their UWC values, broad intercultural experience, and deep intellectual curiosity to strive not only for academic excellence, but also to be agents for positive change on campus and in the world."

Seeking New Insights for Teen Mental Health

“In the fall semester of my sophomore year in college, two people in my life took their lives due to mental-health problems,” writes Nam Do (Vietnam, UWC-USA, Brown ’21). A computer science major, he spent much of the next winter looking through online mental-health sub-forums on Reddit, trying to understand what people there were thinking and how they tried to help each other.

“I vaguely hypothesized that there is a common pattern between many posts on those forums,” he writes. “Those thoughts would be phrased in some very extreme way, such as ‘everyone hates me,’ ‘no one cares about me,’ ‘there’s no point in being alive,’ etc.”

Nam partnered with a fellow Brown student to study the relationship between teenage mental health and absolutist language on social media. He won a Karen T. Romer Undergraduate Teaching and Research Award to support the project, and the researchers presented their results at Brown’s 2019 Summer Research Symposium.

“We’re trying to create a model to detect what absolutist language means,” Nam said in his presentation. “From there, we hopefully will be able to find some correlation between what people identify as absolutist language and suicidal ideation.”

At Brown, Nam also serves as teaching assistant for computer science classes, he’s a peer volunteer to help support students with mental-health concerns, and he has been a trip leader for the university’s Outdoor Leadership Training Program.

“The two values I want to keep in my daily work, for as long as I can,” he concludes, “are learning and contributing.”

PRESIDENTS' PERSPECTIVES

"I have been engaged with the Davis UWC Scholars Program since 2004, and I have always been deeply impressed with the talented young scholars this program attracts. At Richmond we have seen, time and again, how these students not only bring a global perspective to our classrooms, enriching our learning community, but also how they live their commitment to making the world a better place each and every day. Whether it is on campus or in the community or beyond, Davis UWC Scholars are true global leaders committed to harnessing the power of diversity to build true understanding across ideological and cultural boundaries. We are proud to count these exceptional leaders as members of our community, and grateful for everything they do to help us all become better global citizens."

PRESIDENTS' PERSPECTIVES

“Just like the brain builds connections across neurons as it develops and grows, a community is only as strong as the diverse connections within it. By building bridges with their fellow students, with faculty and staff, and with the broader UVA community, our Davis UWC Scholars not only strengthen our community but they also learn and grow as future global leaders. I’m grateful that the university is a partner in the Davis UWC Scholars Program, and I’m glad to see our cohort of scholars continue to grow.”

20 Years of Service to Humanity

Davis UWC Scholars at Princeton

“Being inquisitive and capable of posing the right questions will take us a long way... our four years at Princeton have given us the courage to approach the world as a big question—not only in our professional roles ... but also in our private lives, as thoughtful individuals and citizens.”

—Holger Staude '09

Davis UWC Scholar from Frankfurt, Germany, in his June 2009 commencement address as valedictorian

From 2000 ...

“I believe that recognizing and building on international diversity through education at an influential age is central to the possibilities for global harmony in this new millennium.”

—Shelby M.C. Davis '58 in a letter to Princeton

In the fall of 2000, as one of five pilot schools, Princeton admitted its first cohort of Davis UWC Scholars. Now, 20 years later, we look back with renewed pride and gratitude to have been part of the beginning of a movement to internationalize American college campuses, a movement led by Shelby M.C. Davis '58 and Phil Geier. Princeton's 305 Princetonian Davis UWC Scholars — from the Class of 2004 to the Class of 2023 — hail from 75 countries. They have achieved virtually every success and honor that can be bestowed on our undergraduates. From Rhodes scholar to valedictorian, the group has had a remarkable record of academic performance and support that allows them to graduate with the freedom to pursue their highest aspirations in life.

Princeton's Davis UWC Scholars have brought their global perspectives to our classrooms and dormitories. They have made noteworthy contributions to our campus through their leadership across a broad range of activities. And they have been exemplary models of the service ethos that reflects their Davis UWC and Princeton roots.

... to 2020

“... Davis UWC Scholars have enriched our campus with their thirst for knowledge and their deep commitment to promoting intercultural understanding. Shelby M.C. Davis '58 believes in the power of young people to build global community, and we at Princeton are proud to be working with him to make this vision a reality.”

—Christopher L. Eisgruber '83

Applying to Become a Partner School

The Davis UWC Scholars Program reviews requests on an annual basis from colleges and universities interested in becoming partner schools. To be considered, a letter of request from the institution's president should be submitted, explaining in detail why their school would be a good candidate for the program. An important prerequisite for a candidate school is to have a proven track record of successfully recruiting graduates from United World College schools at the time of application. It's essential that applicant schools are in alignment with the Davis UWC Scholars Program's key goal of the internationalization of the U.S. undergraduate experience by building clusters of globally aware UWC graduates on their domestic campuses. Letters may be submitted at any time during the academic year, but no later than May 31, as decisions will be finalized by August each year.

The Davis UWC Scholars Program makes grants to institutions only — not to individual students. Grants are awarded based on financial need to eligible United World College graduates enrolled at one of the partner schools.
